KAISER'S ILLNESS
KEPT DEEP SECRET

Ruler Is Irritable, Suffering
From Bodily and Mental Ils.

(By MALCOLM CLARKE)
BERLIN July 23.—The Kaiser's illness, which has been the subject of much speculation, is now being treated as a matter of course. The ruler is suffering from a combination of physical and mental ailments, and his condition is being kept secret from the public. The Kaiser's illness has been a source of concern to the German people, and the government has been careful to keep the details of the ruler's condition from becoming public knowledge.

These bounties will be paid to the mothers of children who are under sixteen years of age and who are living in the city of Berlin. The bounties are intended to encourage the birth of children, and to provide for the needs of the young.

Needless to say, the outside world has not been allowed to learn anything of the real nature of the Kaiser's illness. The German people are kept in the dark, and the world is left to speculate on the ruler's condition.

As even more alarming symptoms have lately manifested themselves in the Kaiser's health, the German people are becoming more and more concerned. The ruler's illness is now being treated as a matter of course, and the government is doing everything in its power to keep the details of the ruler's condition from becoming public knowledge.

He will grow angry if he is told of the Kaiser's illness, and he will grow angry if he is told of the Kaiser's illness. The ruler's illness is now being treated as a matter of course, and the government is doing everything in its power to keep the details of the ruler's condition from becoming public knowledge.

It is not a secret, but it is a secret. The ruler's illness is now being treated as a matter of course, and the government is doing everything in its power to keep the details of the ruler's condition from becoming public knowledge.

Younger Son of Princess Clementine of Orleans, and It Was Her Effort That Won His Throne for Him

(By PAUL VILLIERS.)
PARIS, July 23.—The recent visit to Paris of King Ferdinand of Bulgaria with his wife, the Princess Marie, has resulted in a new chapter in the history of the Balkans. The young man, who is the younger son of the late Emperor of Bulgaria, is the son of Princess Clementine of Orleans, and it was her effort that won his throne for him.

Four-and-twenty years ago Ferdinand, then a young man, was the subject of a marriage arranged by his mother, the Princess Clementine, with the young Prince of Bulgaria. The marriage was a political one, and the young man was expected to become a ruler of a great empire.

Twenty-three years ago, when the young man was still a prince, he was the subject of a marriage arranged by his mother, the Princess Clementine, with the young Prince of Bulgaria. The marriage was a political one, and the young man was expected to become a ruler of a great empire.

RACES BATTLE AT THE SEMBERG UNIVERSITY

Bitter Riots at Doors of Building and One Student Loses Life.

POLICE ARE CALLED TO PREVENT STRIFE

Street Fights Are Frequent and Many Are Severely Wounded.

(By EMIL ANDRASSY.)
VIENNA, July 23.—In an country in Europe, where there are more numerous or more bitter antagonizing than in the empire over which the aged Francis Joseph presides.

Azech, Magyar and German are always ready to fly at each other's throats. Pole and Ruthenian are at daggers drawn, and the Slav and the Magyar are ready to fight at the slightest provocation or at the slightest provocation or at the slightest provocation.

Francis Joseph has succeeded in holding the balance between the half hundred or more different nationalities among his subjects and thus held his empire together. It is more than doubtful if his successor will be able to do it.

An instance of the violent race antipathy which prevails was furnished by the recent student riots at the Semberg University.

Without the student's permission 300 Ruthenian students held a meeting of protest in the great hall, and on leaving were met by a body of Polish students. Blows followed abuse, and revolvers were freely used, the police being unable to separate the combatants.

The students were marched and a military escort back to their rooms.

Several street fights took place, shots were fired by the Ruthenians as just at the moment when the Polish students had barricaded the doors of the university.

Thirteen students were wounded, and one student was killed. The latter was a Polish student named Adam Kocik.

ENGLAND FIGHTS WASP SWARMS

Pests Worry Londoners and Keep Gardeners Ever On the Jump.

LONDON, July 23.—Further evidence accumulates daily of the exorbitant number of queer wasps that have appeared in all parts of the country. An account was given recently of the killing of fifty within the hour on a rhododendron bush. This "rhododendron" was exceptional, but so far as visible numbers to this extent have been surpassed in many places.

A gardener in Shrewsbury is killed some twenty queen wasps, a queen wasp, during the past week, and over two were killed within the week in a Hampshire garden. There were a quite number of them on the flowers.

It seems certain that we are at the beginning of a wasp year of unusual violence. The winter seems to have left little or no trace of the cold weather, and the weather is now so warm that the wasps are beginning to appear in large numbers.

Turks Quick to Learn English

The rapid extension of the use of the English language among the people of Turkey is principally due to the American missionary colleges, schools and orphanages. Besides the great educational institutions conducted under American auspices in Constantinople, Beirut and Smyrna, there are schools and colleges in the interior, where strangers, and even the natives, are learning English.

Among the most prominent of the schools for girls and boys are those at Silivri, Marmara, and Van, and at Ankara, and at the American mission schools.

Another great means for the spread of the English language among the people are the Armenians who return from the United States, who are proud of their English-speaking capacity, who teach it to their children, and who send their children to the American mission schools to learn the language properly.

With all these agencies at work it is only a question of a short time until the English language will be spoken all over Turkey, and the Turkish empire will be a part of the English-speaking world.

WOMEN ON JURIES LATEST IN LONDON

Innovation Suggested by Witness May Be Carried Into Effect.

LONDON, July 23.—Women judges and women on juries—these were some of the innovations suggested by a woman witness before the divorce court yesterday.

The witness, Mrs. E. J. Swannell, who has had an extensive experience of life among the Manchester factory girls and workmen people, said that women should be on juries, and that a proportion of the jury should be women.

In divorce cases, she said, the jury should be half women, and when cases involving sex came before the magistrates one of them should be a woman.

Another report, and by far the most reliable, was that an unknown woman had poisoned Mr. Van Valkenburg's mind against his wife.

AT LAST ANNA GOULD HAS RAISED THE SIEGE OF PARIS.

After a Campaign of Many Unhappy Years, During Which, In Spite of Her Millions, She Was Threatened With Social Ostracism, She Has Become the Popular Duchess of Talleyrand, and One of the Reputed Leaders of Parisian Society.

A NNA GOULD, former Countess de Castellane, Princess de Sagan, finally has achieved the aim of years of social battle. She is now the Duchess of Talleyrand, and as such she at last becomes one of the foremost leaders of Parisian society.

Prince de Sagan is the hereditary Duke of Talleyrand. When his father died recently De Sagan became the fifth duke of that name. As the more Prince de Sagan he was looked upon as an outsider by the highest society of the French capital. But as the Duke of Talleyrand he occupies an honored place, second to none, and his duchess, the former Anna Gould, triumphantly enters into a position which for years her millions and efforts have failed to achieve.

The Gould millions wouldn't do it. Count Boni de Castellane's titles wouldn't do it. The royal title of the thoroughly discredited Prince de Sagan wouldn't do it. But the old aristocratic name, Duchess of Talleyrand, opened the door. The siege of Paris, which Anna Gould started when she married Boni, is a success at last, and the Gould millions finally have the opportunity to fet the highest people in France.

THE DUKE OF TALLEYRAND, FORMERLY PRINCE HELLE DE SAGAN

Social Ostracism Apparent Fate.

It has been a long struggle and a hard one. Up to the present time it has appeared that it was going to be a losing one for Anna. Social ostracism has stared her in the face and out of countenance. Her original marriage, with Count Boni, proved a disappointment. No royal doors swung open to the Countess de Castellane, not even when the name was backed with good American dollars. The count had his own circle, but alas and alack! it wasn't the circle that Anna Gould had figured on entering when she became his wife. The best society of France did not receive her with acclaim, and Anna was disappointed and hurt.

Perhaps it is not fair to say that this, the failure of the count's titles to win her the position in European society that she coveted, was the cause of the rupture and final divorce between her and Boni, but it is certain that after the countess had discovered that so far as social standing was concerned her position as Countess de Castellane was but little improved beyond that of mere Anna Gould, her respect for the dapper little count and his family began to decline. It was a shock.

Boni Popular in Some Quarters.

"Boni?" said a certain duchess of a noble French family. "His influence among the ladies of the ballet is unquestionable; he can go anywhere there. Also he is extremely popular among the jewelers and other tradesmen of the Rue de la Paix; he owes them all money. But could he come to my house? No, no; one really must draw the line somewhere, is it not so?"

It was a cruel blow to Anna, a surprise to the Americans "in the know." That dollars can buy their way into any society in this country was one of the Gould maxims, and that title, no matter how much disgraced, no matter in what had order, would secure entrance to the homes of continental aristocracy was another accepted opinion, especially when the titles were backed by a fortune such as belonged to Anna Gould. The Countess de Castellane came to Paris with Boni at her side, her father's millions behind her, and—so she thought—the conquest of the French capital at her feet. It was a second invasion, but it did not meet with the success that attended that of the Germans in '71. The true aristocracy, proud and haughty with the hauteur that comes from centuries of the best blood of France, took one look at Anna through its lorgnettes, and said:

"How truly unfortunate that she should have married that odious and utterly discredited Boni. With a proper husband she would be esteemed by acceptable, and—who knows?—might in time become a craze."

Count at Least Scores Success.

The count, being long accustomed to being snubbed by the society leaders of his country, and having recognized and accepted the position on the fringe of the ball world that society had allotted to him, accepted this treatment as a matter of course, used the Gould millions to rehabilitate the Castellane castles and villas, paid some of his most pressing creditors, and started in to enjoy that part of Parisian life which was open to him and where he knew that he belonged.

With his credit reestablished, his standing with restaurateurs, wine agents, jewelers, and other tradesmen once more assured, he began to cut a dash in the society to which he was accustomed. The women of the theater welcomed him with open arms. He was a brilliant success. He had reconquered his part of Paris.

But his part was not the part that his countess desired to enter. While Boni was flinging his money away in riotous entertainments for his latest favorites the countess remained at home, angry because the higher society had not stretched forth the hand of welcome. Boni, as happy as only a Parisian can be with the money sufficient to make him popular in the capital, could not understand. Thus came the first parting of the ways. Anna grew wroth. She intimated to Boni that it was high time he began to use his influence to secure for their a fixed position in high society. It is rumored that she even intimated that it might be best for him to continue to spend money unless he adopted such a course.

Boni's Efforts of Little Effect.

Like the polite and obliging Frenchman that he was, Boni responded to the demands of his wife with a vim. He went to his most influential friends, he demanded in the name of De Castellane and the Gould millions that they assist him in securing entrance for his countess among the best people. They likewise responded with great willingness. A few minor duchesses were influenced to give balls and receptions in the honor of the American heiress. Anna herself gave gorgeous affairs. It was a strenuous siege. The Gould money flowed like water, but it flow was not sufficient to wipe away the barrier that society had erected against the assaults of Boni. Anna gave up the fight, and soon after rumors of differences between herself and the count began to be known.

The eventual result of these differences the world knows. Disappointed in Boni as a man and as a titled being, the countess began to devote herself to their two children. Boni, quite content with such an arrangement, went elsewhere. The pretense of a home was kept up; but Boni and Anna had ceased to be man and wife. At the same time the countess gave up for the time being her siege of Paris and lived a quiet, uneventful existence until the De Sagan affair. This was the second stage in the new siege of Paris. The Princess de Sagan, being Boni's own cousin, was one of the persons who strove to assist Anna in breaking through the barrier of reserve that hedged around French aristocracy. He was one of those who heeded Boni's appeal and used such influence as he had to force from his friends invitations to the new countess. And it was his hearty efforts along this line, his sympathy for the countess struggling for recognition under the handicap of Boni's reputation, that first won him the regard of Anna.

Way Cleared for His Courtship.

"After all," said he, "what is social eminence but to be a shining mark for the misfortunes that attend the night? Were it not better, more conducive to happiness, for two souls between whom exists a mutual bond to make their own happiness without troubling about society? Two hearts that understand one another, alone in a villa in the country, away from such sordid self-seeking as exists in this city—ah! such is the ideal existence!"

Little by little the countess began to think that way, too. At the same time it is said that she never overlooked the fact that the Prince de Sagan, even if he was in debt up to his ears, was in infinitely better standing than poor Boni de Castellane. There were at least a few of the high houses in Paris open to the prince; they were all shut to Boni. Again, it was said that De Sagan, while an angel, was a better man than Boni. He was esteemed and respected by many worthy people. Would it not be possible, with the De Sagan holdings and titles rehabilitated by her money, once more to lay siege to Paris—and win?

Why not? It had only been Boni's reputation that had kept her from attaining her heart's desire—social leadership in the capital. Behind him her money had been useless. But with De Sagan, how different it might be!

The subsequent courtship of the prince, his flight with Anna's flight to America, the prince's following, the strenuous objections of Anna's brother, and the sudden marriage of the Prince and Anna while the scandal of the affair was at white heat, all are well known to every newspaper reader in the world. The couple went to Italy to spend their honeymoon. After a stay they returned to Paris. And then came shock No. 2 for Anna, now Princess de Sagan.

Society Open in Its Disapproval.

To her amazement the social leaders of Paris had been shocked at her affair with De Sagan. The aristocrats, considered the most lenient in the world in matters matrimonial, did not approve of the divorce and remarriage under the circumstances. They went further than before; they made no effort to hide the fact that for their actions the Prince and Princess de Sagan had been sent to social Coventry.

The birth of a child to the pair did little to soften the attitude of the haughty toward them. They still were ostracized from the highest walks of Paris.

Then the prince's father, the Duke of Talleyrand, died. The prince inherited the title. The inheritance brought nothing else with it, for the old duke long had been in hopeless debt and had existed on a pitiful allowance of $5,000 a year. But the title—ah! that was the thing. It opened doors that nothing else could force.

"The Duke and Duchess of Talleyrand," announced the footmen, and society's portals opened and they walked right in. For the title Duchess of Talleyrand is one of the proudest in all Europe, and she who bears it must be acknowledged a social queen, no matter what has gone before. The title was first given to the great Talleyrand, and since his time all its bearers have been persons grata even with the proverbial crowned heads of Europe.

So Anna Gould has triumphed at last. What Jay Gould's millions could not do, what the successive titles of countess and princess could not do, the death of an old man, and the subsequent inheritance of a title by his son, has accomplished. The siege of Paris becomes a victory, and Anna today is one of the foremost leaders of Parisian society.

The shock's accomplished with success. No goat c'er did so well. And Bulgy's sense of safety this fierce action doth dispel. The boy is thrust right in the sack. Of course his feet are last. He doesn't know what's happened and his courage oozes fast.

Soon Bill and Budd return and find there's something in the sack. However, all the outlines of a hare it seems to lack. The goat looks on and utters "bah" to see them so perplexed. Poor Bulgy is so stifled he can't tell how much he's vexed.

They lift the bag and find their chum. Then wonderment is great. The goat refrains from showing up, the reason to relate. "You fell asleep," shout Bill and Budd, their laughter rising high. "You fellows kicked me!" is the "goat's" short, sharp, accusing cry.

Age certainly saps one's vitality, and I'm a trifle corpulent now, but I've still got that active brain that so often stood me in good stead. I remember once when my brain accomplished more than an army of workmen could do.

OLD OPIE DILLDOCK'S STORIES

(Copyright 1910, by The Tribune Company, Chicago, Ill.)

The time that I am speaking of when gray matter conquered brute force was a pleasant sunny day in July in the city of Chicago. A large building was being erected on Michigan avenue and in setting up some of the large stone pillars the derrick broke time and again, dropping the stones and endangering the lives of the workmen.

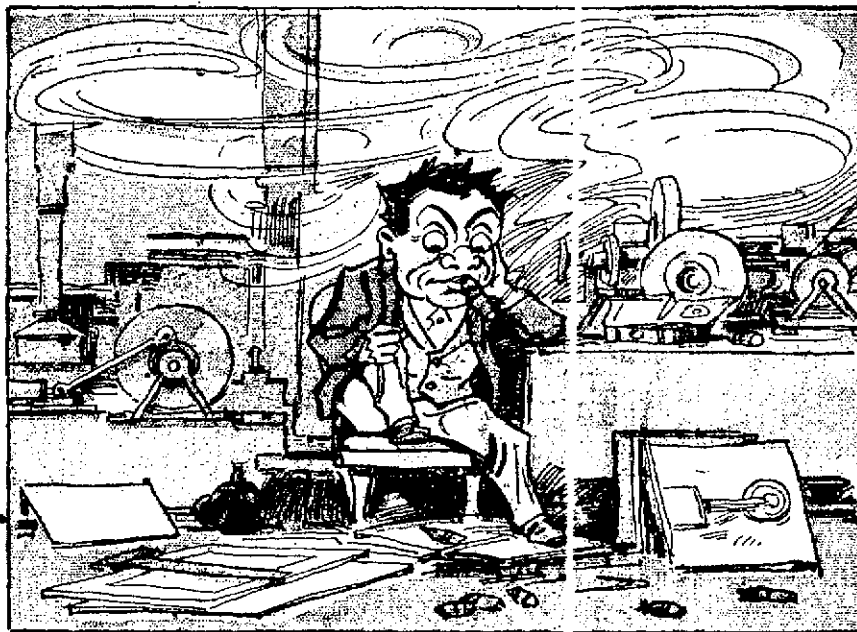

I happened to be passing by the building when one of the largest pillars fell, the fault of the hoisting engineer in not tightening his clamps. I sought out the contractor and told him I could devise a safer way than he was employing in placing those pillars. He laughed scornfully and expostulated, saying he guessed he knew his business.

"Just a minute," said I. "Now, none of us ever gets too old to learn. I've got a large part of my fortune here (and I flashed the money before his eyes), something like two million dollars, and if I don't put those pillars up in a jiffy and save you a whole lot of time and money you may keep this and buy the hair apparent a nice new shining velocipede."

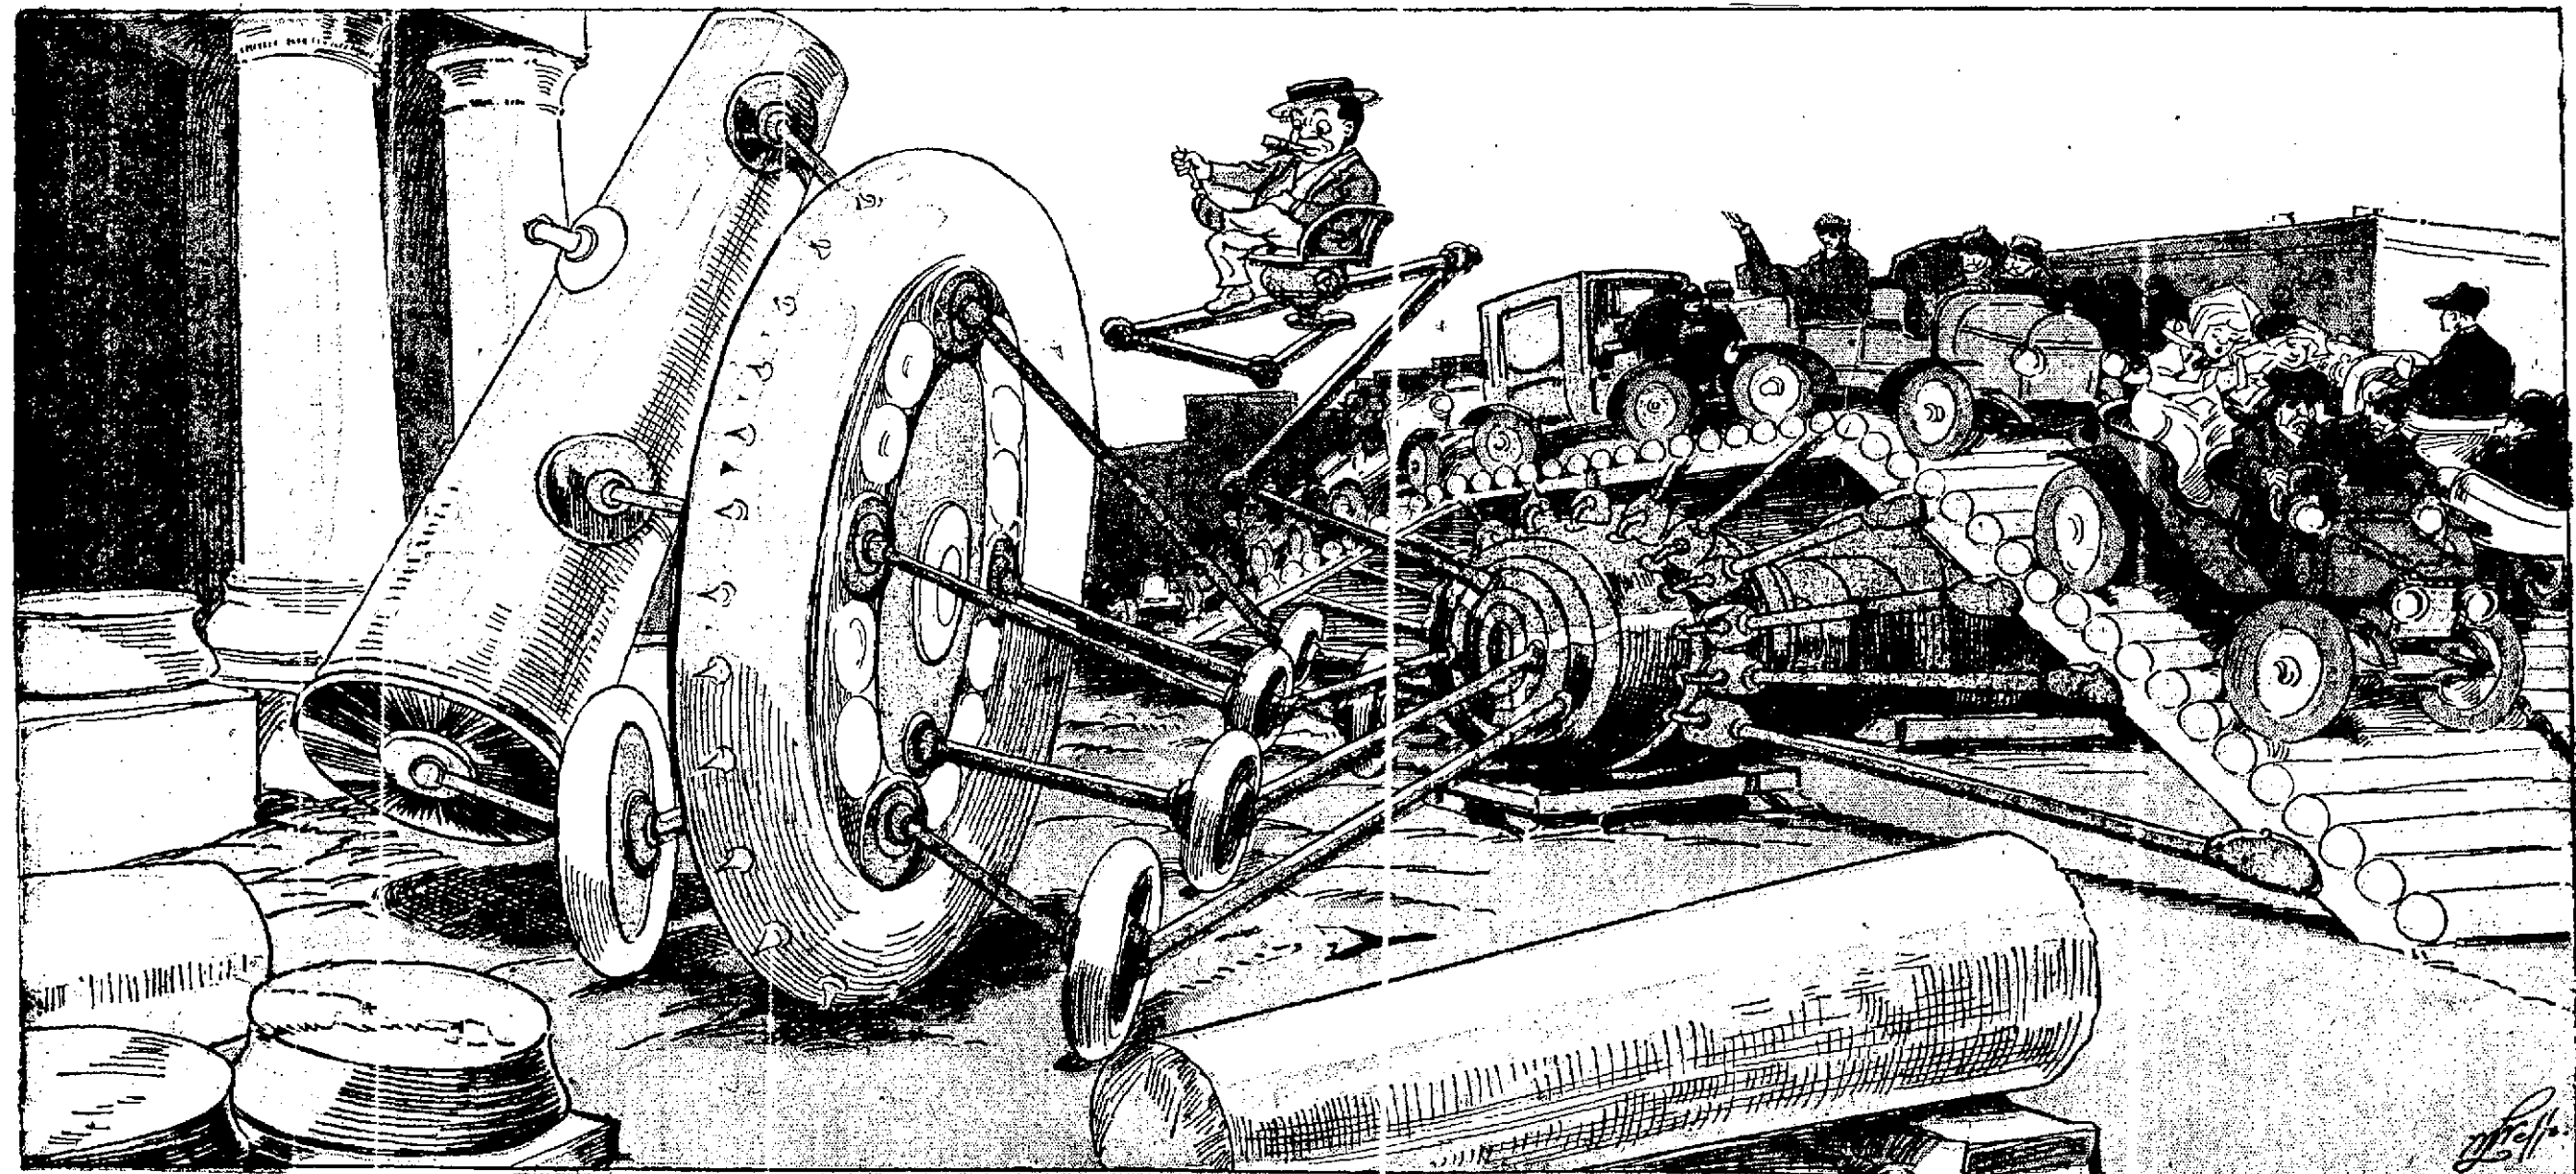

Well, that convinced him and pocketing the money he told me to go ahead with my rat killin'. Immediately I turned away and threw myself into a deep study. It was no small undertaking, I realized that much, and I was worried slightly—not over the money, of course, for at that time such a small amount was of but little importance.

The longer I thought the harder seemed the solution. I sat in my study and smoked probably a couple hundred cigars and pored over innumerable models which I had constructed only to tear apart again. The harder I thought the more confused I became—something that happened rarely—and finally putting on my hat I sauntered out on Michigan boulevard.

As I strolled in the open air my brain immediately cleared. An endless stream of automobiles was winding down the thoroughfare. Quick as a flash the solution of the difficulty came to me. Why not utilize the wasted energy of those machines and concentrate their power? I dashed back to my laboratory and went to work with feverish haste.

This large wheel revolved and from it protruded several arms tipped with large suction caps. High in the air on a flexible arm which extended in all directions I sat and engineered the job of erecting those pillars. Against their smooth surface I would throw the suction caps which, acting like monster hands, picked the heavy pillars up from the ground and placed them in position. Within an hour I had every column in place. Then I destroyed my machine as I did not want to be the means of throwing all the hoisting engineers in the world out of jobs.

In less time than it takes to tell it I had constructed across the boulevard a huge dynamo, over which I built a bridge of revolving copper tubes. Against these tubes large conducting arms rested, leading to the dynamo. Over the bridge poured countless autos, generating power into these flange arms, from whence it was conducted to the dynamo and from the dynamo, through another series of arms, into a few gyroscope wheels, which carried the current through a magnetic wheel of gigantic proportions. The air fairly bristled with electric currents.

I have not any objection to taking the public into my confidence and telling them just what business we

AVIATION MAKING MANY FAMOUS IN ONE DAY'S FLIGHTS

Where Single Man Gives Life Dozen Others
Are Eagerly Awaiting Chance to Enter Contests

MAN birds, aviators, sky bugs call the intrepid navigators of the atmosphere who have astonished the scientific world and furnished such wonderful gossip for the people at large in the past few months, what you will you can get away from this fact. There has been born to us a new sort of hero. The hero of the air.

No more convincing proof could be needed that the brave fellows who are daily turning topsy turvy things natural and accomplishing what has for centuries been deemed impossible are real heroes rather than merely dare devils and adventurists than a glance over the list of fatalities that have taken place since the first of this year, the half of which has seen such remarkable progress in the science of aviation.

The list of men who have reached the hero class is not a long one. Much more lengthy is the list which details the names of the courageous fellows who have become martyrs to the new science.

Aviators have made remarkable strides this year. Hardly a day passes that a record is set for a long distance flight or a dash of speed. The cost in loss of life, however, has been minimal.

Lieutenant Pathan, Curtiss Hamilton Brooklin—here are names that until a short time ago meant little to the public mind. Now, however, in the light of the wonder of the men who bear them have achieved their stand for heroic deed.

Lieutenant and Pathan's work have been confined largely to the ether side of the sea. Here in America the record-breaking has been done by Curtiss, Hamilton and Brooklin.

Hardly had the great public ceased wondering about Glenn Curtiss' marvelous flight from Albany to New York when his pupil, Hamilton, covered an even greater distance in his airship between Philadelphia and New York.

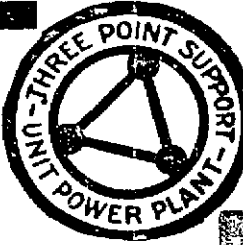

Today we need not wonder at the work of these men. We need only wonder at the work of the men who are daily turning topsy turvy things natural and accomplishing what has for centuries been deemed impossible are real heroes rather than merely dare devils and adventurists than a glance over the list of fatalities that have taken place since the first of this year, the half of which has seen such remarkable progress in the science of aviation.

The Model R

1904 to 1911
A Record of Two Models of Motor Cars

1. Stevens-Duryea four-cylinder Model R was designed in 1904 and test Models put upon the road. The Model R was a light weight four-cylinder shaft drive touring car with a wheel base of 90 inches.

It was of original design and a revolution in motor car construction. It had the first four-cylinder "Unit Power Plant" supported on "Three Points". This design of power plant was a tremendous success, and this success was based on the remarkable performance of each individual car.

2. In 1905 this model was continued without change and every car delivered made a staunch friend and established a reputation for a most enviable reputation.

Natural recognition of the excellence of a product that was mechanically correct in design.

3. 1906 was a repetition of the previous years—the same model without change in power plant or design of complete car.

Additional proof of the value of a light weight five-passenger touring car, requiring a minimum of upkeep expense.

4. Again in 1907 the continuance of this Model R with the same four-cylinder, 20 horse power, Unit Power Plant supported on three points.

A demonstration of its individuality, copied with unqualified and enthusiastic endorsement of hundreds of satisfied owners.

5. In the year 1908 was introduced a new four-cylinder motor car bearing the name Stevens-Duryea. Its wheel base was lengthened to 124 inches and the power increased. This Model X was engineered by the same master minds that designed the Model R in 1904, which embodied features that established it as a uniformly good motor car or four years without change.

The Model X received a most gratifying reception, and retained every essential detail of design and manufacture that had proven its real worth under real tests.

6. 1909 was a record year and most impressively expressed the growing strength of a concern that adhered to an unvarying policy that gave to each purchaser of its cars value received.

The power plant of the Model X was of the "Unit Type" and supported in the same way as the Model R of 1904—additional proof of the value of its design.

7. 1910 a continuation of the Model X—the same model today—and recognized by critical judges as holding a distinctive position in the motor car world.

The Model X itself and the policy of the company are unanswerable arguments in favor of a standardized design of motor car. Proven by the value of a used Stevens-Duryea.

SUBSTANTIAL PROOF

Without exception the review of the Motor World, the Automobile Age and Motor World, pay as high tribute to the distinctive position held by the Stevens-Duryea Motor Cars as any other comparative record.

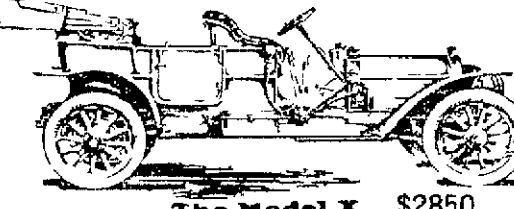

Taking these representative motor magazines from December 3, 1909 to March 24, 1910—a total of 5762 second-hand cars of all makes were offered for sale, while only 133 Stevens-Duryea cars were offered, including models from 1902 to 1909.

THIS REPRESENTS ONLY 23 PER CENT OF THE ENTIRE FIRST USED CARS ADVERTISED IN THESE MAGAZINES.

The Motor Age of February 3, 1910, contained advertisements of 400 second-hand cars, and the Stevens-Duryea was represented by only 2 per cent of this or eight cars out of 400.

These facts demonstrate what is impressive, what is convincing, and what is significant of VALUE RECEIVED by owners of STEVENS-DURYEA MOTOR CARS.

Californians and Their Joy In Outdoor Life

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—It begins to look very much as if labor and capital would seriously lock horns in San Francisco. The clash should come within a year, if everything runs to program.

Of course, we have had clash after clash in the past, but these were mere skirmishes compared to the grand battle that is now impending and for which the contending forces are now being placed. The skirmishes of the past have generally been won by labor, because labor was organized and capital was not. Now capital is organizing and its plans have a wide scope.

In past strikes some firm or firms would give way—fall down, as the expression is—and this would leave the others in no position to carry on the struggle. The Citizens' Alliance has worked with half-hearted support from comparatively few firms, and managed to pick a couple of prize jackasses as managers in its first years. So labor has been getting more and more the upper hand.

Well, you may have noticed a movement the other day to consolidate the Merchants' Exchange, the Merchants' Association, the Downtown Association and the Chamber of Commerce. Behind that consolidation is an intention to have it out with labor to a finish.

The Banks as the Backbone

It is intended to make the banks the backbone of the movement to organize capital for the fray. There is a belief that if the banks will stand in, the contest can be carried on in such a way that the weak-kneed or self-seeking firms may be kept in line—whipped into line if necessary.

We will suppose that there is a strike or lockout in a certain line of industry. In the thick of the warfare some big firm sees a chance to make a name and money and get the better of its competitors by yielding to organized labor. That has been the fashion in the past.

Aha! That is where the bank come in. The firm that tries to break from ranks will find that its banking credit is gone. It will be unable to float its commercial paper unless it gets back into line and agrees to keep up the fight for open shop. It will be told that capital can put a boycott on its business as well as labor.

Such is the scheme of things, and when Samuel Gompers gets out here he will find that there is the most formidable attempt to organize capital against organized labor that the western coast has ever known. It now remains to be seen whether the dream can be realized. The preliminary steps have been taken. Can capital be organized in San Francisco?

Life in the Open Air

"When I first came to California in the 70s I was struck by the fact that there was no outdoor life among the people," said a leading millionaire. "I was greatly surprised at this, because of all the land this State offered the most attractions for the life in the open. But now just note the change. The men do not cling to the bars and clubs and poker rooms as they did then. The women give up all social pleasures and rush to the springs. The change is complete."

This change has worked what is known as "the summer drop" in business. The papers have thousands less in circulation. The retailers take things easy while so many of their patrons are away. The clubs and town life dull. It is a pity to be quite the thing for a club to have an eating place of its own where members may live in tents and breathe free air.

"The Family" is just celebrating its annual "Flight of the Stork" at its beautiful "family farm" at Portola, about eight miles back of Redwood in the mountains of the peninsula. The "farm" has been open since early spring. It will not close until late fall. There are always members camping in the grove—always some amusement about.

Next week the Bohemians will open their camp in the club's wondrous forest preserve near Monte Rio on the Russian river. There the great Mid-summer Jinks will be celebrated, with the game play of the year. These festivities are attracting the attention of the world. As you have previously noted, the play is this year by Charles K. Field, the incidental music by W. J. McCoy. The members sleep in tents all during the two weeks of outing. Their sports are all in the open. It is a life of healthful pleasure at its best. Of a truth Californians have learned to enjoy that life in the open which our climate is so exceptionally fitted to make healthful and joyous. No more can the stranger blame us for sticking to the city in the summer time.

The Old Familiar Democratic Faces

Are we to lose from Sacramento some of our old familiar Democratic faces? Harder and harder does it become for a Democrat to get and hold office in California, and some of our followers of Jefferson, Jackson, Tilden and Bryan may find their well-worn Senate seats occupied by others.

In the first place, Senator E. O. Miller of Visalia is not going to run again. He was the most influential member in the last Senate, and would have made a good run for Governor; but poor health has driven him out of politics for a time.

Old "Constitutional John" Curtin, who has been in the Legislature time out of mind, is to be given a tussle for his Senate seat. He is considered too close to Jere Burke, and so the Lincoln-Roosevelt League has set out to trim him, backing R. L. Bennett of Modesto. At times in the past Curtin has been elected without a sign of opposition from Republicans or Democrats, but this year he must step down.

Senator Cartwright, down in Fresno, is another Democrat who is in danger. He is running against A. M. Drew, the present Republican Assemblyman, who has the backing of the Lincoln-Roosevelt League. The president of the league, Chester Rowell, has said that Cartwright has the better of the fight; but politics is an uncertain game, and Fresno is more and more a Republican county.

Even Sanford Is in Danger

Then in the Fourth Senatorial district Senator J. B. Sanford also has a big fight on his hands. This is a normally Democratic district, as Colusa, Glenn and Lake, all Democratic counties, are switched on to Mendocino, which is "mighty on-swing." But the Colusa Glenn end of the district complains that Sanford has not given it enough attention and the Boggs interests are out to scalp him. Dr. Prather of Adams Springs, the Democratic leader in Lake, is also against Sanford; so, though that veteran legislator has strengthened himself in the coast lumber camps, he may go down to defeat in a landslide Republican year.

On the other hand, an old-time Democratic figure may revisit the glimpses of Sacramento. This is none other than T. W. H. Shanahan, the "Tall Sycamore of Shasta." He is to be the Democratic candidate for Senator in the far northern district including Siskiyou, Shasta, Modoc and Lassen. A Democrat has a good fighting chance there, and in the fierce Republican scrap between Arthur M. Dean, now Assemblyman, and E. C. Bonner of Alturas, the league candidate, Shanahan may slip through and win.

It is rather taken for granted that A. Caminetti will be re-elected to the Senate, as nobody seems able to beat "Cam" in his district, that runs up and down the Mother Lode and crosses the Sierras to the edge of the Nevada deserts. It would be a pity to lose Caminetti, as he is always doing politics on the floor and making trouble. Having had years of experience in Congress as well as in both houses at Sacramento, he makes any Republican leader step lively, and he used to get Lieutenant-Governor Warren Porter so angry he could hardly speak.

Tom Kennedy, one of two Democratic Senators from San Francisco, also comes up for re-election this year, but as he has the backing of the Republican machine, the reform Democrats hardly count him one of them, any more than they count on Senator Hare, a hold-over from this city. Yet there was a time when every Senator from San Francisco was a Democrat—and Chris Buckley voted all of them.

Assessing the High Structures

San Francisco has recently occupied the somewhat novel position of seeking to increase its assessed values beyond the figures its Assessor has fixed as sufficient to meet the estimated costs of maintaining the municipal government and paying the city's proportion of the State tax, etc.

It remained for Supervisor Charles A. Nelson, to whose credit it should be said has lately learned to read and write, to propose a scheme for increasing the assessed value of property by placing a figure on high structures on a par with the cost of their construction. Most of these structures were erected following the fire and at a time when building material cost at least 50 per cent more than the normal charges, and labor was so high that it was not an unusual thing for a builder to pay a mechanic, including extra time, $14 for a day's work. The Assessor had considered these conditions in making his figures, but the Supervisor saw some tall structures and did not wait to consider the difference between their cost when erected and their actual value, nor did he consider that many of them are paying in rental returns not to exceed 2 per cent on the actual investment.

Nelson was quickly squelched by his fellow Supervisors, but owners of tall buildings in San Francisco are fearful lest the State Board of Equalization give heed to some of Supervisor Nelson's ill-advised statements.

A Little Known Beauty Land

After all these years of neglect, the transportation companies are advertising the beauties of the lower Sacramento river and the pleasures of a steamboat trip thereon. At last, you see advertisements of the "Netherlands Route" and similar type explosions to catch the eye, and hundreds of people who had an idea that the lower Sacramento was an overflowed swamp in winter and the haunt of the mosquito and the goat in summer have been surprised to find it one of the most beautiful sections of the State, with a climate generally salubrious and a productivity almost beyond belief.

It is in this section that the fruit grower leads a life more nearly approaching to that of the old Southern plantation owner than any other life in the land. Generally Chinamen cultivate and prune the orchards, pick and pack the fruit on shares. The owner oversees the work and attends to the marketing of the crop. His home is frequently a mansion, with all the comforts and luxuries of a city home. His children are sent to the universities. He has time for culture, and the beautiful, broad river, lined with oaks and willows and sycamore trees, festooned with wild grape vines, gives him easy access to San Francisco and Oakland and insures him the cheapest freight rates.

The land is all under reclamation and cultivated like a show place. The orchards are on the land near the river banks. Back of them are garden stretches or dairies where fancy cattle crop ever-green alfalfa—a fallow that gives five cuttings a year at times. I expect a great boom in this land now that its possibilities are being advertised and shown.

Hodcarriers and Bricklayers Pleased

According to report in labor circles, the bricklayers and hodcarriers are to be given a reduction in hours of labor. I therefore the hodcarriers in San Francisco, as elsewhere, have been required to go to work in the morning at twenty minutes before 8 o'clock in order to have mortar and brick ready for the layers, who began work at the latter hour.

For the same reason the hodcarriers were required to resume their labors after the noon rest at 10 minutes of 1 o'clock.

Under this practice the hodcarriers worked eight and one-half hours a day and the bricklayers eight hours. The carriers demanded an eight-hour day, and in this they were sustained by the Building Trades Council and the 25th inst. set as the time for the order to become effective.

It would appear that under this new rule the hours of the bricklayers will be reduced to seven and one-half and those of the hodcarriers to eight a day.

Possibly one purpose of the reduction of hours was to secure a more extended distribution of work, which during the summer months has been very slack in the building line. On one business day last week not a single building permit was issued by the Board of Public Works, which is unprecedented in the history of that municipal department.

Judge Fairall and His New Hat

The "Cabinet," which meets daily at the roundtable of the Palace Hotel to discuss and dispose of questions of vital importance to this and other nations of the earth, is all torn up. While statecraft, diplomacy, the sciences and other topics that interest the superman are considered by this assembly, reflection is an incidental purpose of the daily gathering.

The cause of the present turmoil among these savants is a bet—a wager on the recent engagement between the white and the black at Reno. Tom McCann, agent for a babbling wine, bet with Judge Charles H. Fairall a hat that Jeffries would win the jurist favoring Johnson. Last week McCann received a bill of $10 for an "opera hat" purchased by the Judge. Although this was a comparatively trifling matter, it was taken up for debate by the Cabinet. The opinions expressed were, of course, both brilliant and varied. One eminent attorney suggested that as Judge Fairall had been a leader of the bar at Stockton or several years prior to taking up the practice of the law in San Francisco, McCann was fully justified in his one-time belief that a hat of the $3 to $5 variety such as the jurist was accustomed to wear, was involved in the wager, and not the more expensive headpiece.

But this serious aspect of the transaction was superseded by a happier discussion of the best way of celebrating the acquisition of the title by the Judge. Many ideas were advanced, but that most favored was a promenade concert with the Judge wearing his full dress hat and leaning gracefully on McCann's arm, the loser to appear uncovered, the pair leading the grand march to slow music.

The manner of the demonstration, however, will not be fully determined until the return of James H. O'Brien, lean of the Cabinet, who is now in Oregon engaged in railway construction.

State Campaign in Full Swing

The State campaign is now in full swing, and during the next three weeks, preceding the primary, as spirited canvass as the State ever witnessed may be expected. This campaign opened in a rather lackadaisical way but now the candidates themselves are straining every nerve and the various political interests are making every effort to insure the success of their chosen candidates.

As this is the first State campaign held under the present primary law, there are no precedents for comparison. It is apparent, however, that never before has a campaign been more carefully organized, nor has there ever been a similar contest in which the candidates and the party managers have made such strenuous efforts to advance their various causes and ambitions.

In their struggle to secure votes at the preliminary election the interested persons—candidates and political managers—may be said to have gone over the State with a fine-tooth comb in search of such assistance as might be made of avail.

Candidates Don Their War Paint

Two weeks ago the citizens at large were paying little attention to politics, and candidates for minor offices were not only little discussed, but found it difficult to gain the ear and attention of the electors they met in making their canvasses. Now all this is changed. There is an awakened interest in the campaign. A candidate recently remarked that where ten days ago he could get an audience with an elector only with difficulty, now the citizens are becoming so interested in the canvass that they detain the candidates to talk politics.

The outlook is for a sizzling campaign during the two weeks preceding the primary.

All the leading candidates have their war paint on and have taken the trail for the final struggle. Charles E. Curry has been in the northern part of the State and will soon work his way south again. Alden Anderson is in Southern California and will make his way back to San Francisco through the coast counties, each of which he will canvass. He, as well as the other candidates for Governor, appear to be intending to make his final rally in San Francisco and neighboring bay counties. Hiram Johnson will canvass the southern counties for a third time and then choose San Francisco or the final battle ground.

Nat Ellery is slawhaunging all the opposing candidates for Governor as he roams up and down the State. While there has been no stampede of electors to the State Engineer, he yet seems to have secured some following in Humboldt, his home county, and also in the San Joaquin valley, where he has been engaged in building the Kings river highway and other public work.

Phil Stanton did not make much headway in his canvass of the north and his supporters in the south are now becoming aware of that fact and are less demonstrative in the declarations relative to the result of the primary.

Millionaire Kent and His Campaign

The managers of the Lincoln-Roosevelt League are not overjoyous in relation to the fight of William E. Kent, the Chicago millionaire, for Congress in the Second district. They regard it as a diversion of the good coin of that capitalist from the general campaign sack of the League to Kent's private political enterprise. This is a keen disappointment to those Leaguers who have sought to finance the campaign with contributions from millionaires, as Kent was regarded as a good mark, and he was not permitted to withdraw from their general game without a protest from them. But Kent's reported to have been stubborn and insisted on playing his own game at his own price and in his own way.

Milton U'Ren, who was associated with the Good Government League, otherwise Isidor Jacobs, at the time of the malodorous postage stamp primary held by the organization, is Kent's campaign manager. While U'Ren is regarded as a very agreeable personality, as a political manager he does not stand high and a wail is being emitted by the Lincoln-Roosevelt Leaguers from one end of the Congressional district to the other and the name of this campaign manager is being taken very much in vain. It is doubtful if U'Ren would recognize his name if he should hear it as it is spoken in the Second Congressional district.

Bit His Tongue In a Dream

One of the permanent guests at the St. Francis, Leo E. Sexton, a well-known young San Franciscan, had a nightmare the other night while anxiously slumbering in his artistic and expensively fitted up apartments and it played havoc with his tongue. In his dream of terror and danger young Sexton almost bit half of his tongue off and the doctor had to put four stitches in that very necessary and useful organ in order to help repair the damage. It is not known whether Sexton retired early or late, whether he dined on lobster or ate excessively of the first venison steak of the season. Uneasy, however, lay his head that night, so much so that his subconscious self took to aviation flights. In his dream Sexton was a veritable Wright, Curtiss or Count Zeppelin. Then to be in the fashion just now, his machine broke down and plunged to earth. Sexton fell in a tree and with hands and mouth he grabbed at the branches to stay his fall. He finally got a small, stout limb of the tree in his mouth and held on for dear life. Then he awoke with a yell and pain, for his teeth had sank into his tongue instead of a tree limb.

Legends of Yosemite

Allan Dunn of the Bohemian Club and San Francisco Stage Society and delightful raconteur, is shortly to have published by a Boston house his "Legends of Yosemite in Song and Story," a volume containing some quaint and clever lyric efforts. Some of the lyrics have been set to music by Dr. Humphrey J. Stewart. As the Yosemite legend runs, the valley's great chief is Tu-teck-ah-nu-lah. The Indians of the region for many years have clauted to this great chief a prayer which Mr. Dunn sets forth in his book as follows:

"Quail from the covert and fish from the river,
Deer from the upland and nuts from the grove,
Berries and flowers for the women we love;
Grant in abundance, oh Bountiful Giver,
Smile on Ah-wah-nee,
Let our prayers reach thee,
This we beseech of thee;
Mighty One,
Guardian,
God of our tribe.

Great is thy kindness as great is thy stature;
Voice like the thunder that circles thy throne;
Smile on thy children, oh Bountiful One;
Grant us our needs in thy merciful nature.
Smile on Ah-wah-nee,
Let our prayers reach thee,
This we beseech of thee;
Mighty One,
Guardian,
God of our tribe."

When McMillan Welched

Harry McMillan, mining man and the admirer and rumored fiance of Edna Goodrich just before she married Actor Nat Goodwin, has been about town for a few days past. McMillan, who, by the way, is a prosperous-looking, up-to-date chap, is now numbered as a member of the In-Bad Club by the Reno gambling fraternity. He used to be fond of wooing Dame Fortune by a fling at faro and roulette in the Reno halls of chance. On one occasion he quit about $3000 ahead of the game. The next time he went back to take their money away from the gamblers they got $10,000 of his money. That is, they thought they did. McMillan gave them a check to cover his losses in the most nonchalant manner. The gamblers admired his nerve as a loser. The next day he stopped payment on the check and they heaped imprecations upon his precious head. They sued him in the Nevada courts and lost, for even in the Sagebrush State the courts will not take notice of a gambling debt. In fact, the Nevada courts have ruled that where a man cashes a check in a gambling resort before playing a cent, he can, if he wants to, stop payment on it if he loses at gambling in the resort at that time any of the money obtained on the check.

When Edgren Called Hearst Down

I saw Robert Edgren, a sporting writer on the New York World, on the street yesterday. "Bob," as his many friends call him, was formerly a famous athlete of the University of California and began his newspaper career as an artist on the Examiner in this city. Later on he went with the Hearst papers in New York. One day while at work on a difficult sketch for the next morning's issue of the New York American, Edgren became conscious that some one had quietly entered the room and was looking at him work over his shoulder. Whoever it might be, he did not like to tell him to go away. He became fidgety and finally so restless as to prevent him doing good work in the brief space of time permitted him to finish the drawing. At last, all out of patience and without looking back, Edgren remarked:

"If you are so interested in this sketch, suppose you sit down here and finish it."

There was a merry chuckle by way of reply and on turning around Edgren found Mr. Hearst was behind him. The artist was greatly embarrassed for a moment, but Hearst came to his relief, remarking:

"That's good work, Mr. Edgren. Go right ahead with it and don't let me bother you." Both had a hearty laugh and Hearst walked off about other matters.

Engagement of Miss Ives

The engagement of Miss Florence Ives to Othello Scribner, the wealthy oil man and associate of W. S. Porter, J. A. Chanler and others of the new crop of California millionaires, calls to mind a bit of California history in which a relative of the young lady's family and other prominent people figure.

Miss Ives' aunt was the wife of Charles McLaughlin, the wealthy land and railroad operator, who forty years ago made a fortune out of the Western Pacific Railroad between San Jose and Sacramento via Niles. He built part of the line and then sold out to Huntington and his associates. They completed it to Sacramento, after first finishing the Central Pacific to Ogden. Jerome Cox was a contractor under McLaughlin in building the Western Pacific. They had interminable litigation in the courts over how much McLaughlin owed Cox on his work as a contractor.

One day Cox went to McLaughlin's office on Montgomery street, near Pacific, to try and effect a compromise settlement. McLaughlin made an assault on Cox with a bowie knife he always carried and Cox pulled out a gun and shot him dead. A coroner's jury exonerated Cox. The latter continued his litigation against McLaughlin's estate. He brought Attorney D. M. Delmas into the case and by the aid of the latter got a substantial verdict. About this time Delmas began buying up at a cheap price a lot of Cox's paper that was floating about this city and State. He expected to make a profit by having Cox redeem it at its full value out of his judgment against the McLaughlin estate. Cox found it out and sued Delmas for the return of the paper at the figure he had purchased it, claiming that Delmas as his lawyer could not act contrary to his interest. The suit involved $30,000. In this action Delmas was his own attorney. In a fine forensic effort, he told the jury that a verdict by them against him would be cruel and unjust and would greatly reflect on his integrity as a lawyer. When Delmas made his eloquent plea the courtroom was crowded. The jury gave a verdict in favor of Cox. McLaughlin's widow was left a fortune. On her death it went to the Ives family and other kin.

Clever Stories of a Doctor

Prof. Henry Matthews of Detroit, who was one of the delegates to the recent American Chemists' Convention here, is a charming entertainer and while at the St. Francis was ever ready to tell a story with his after-dinner cigar. At one time Professor Matthews was a practicing physician. In giving some of his experiences in that profession one evening he said on one occasion he received a "hurry call" from a patient living eight miles from his country town office. He was met at the gate by the husband of the patient, who said, with a certain note of pride in his voice:

"Well, doc, you're a little late. They got here ahead of you, b'gosh."

They? I asked, "Do you mean to say you have twins in the house?"

"Twins, doc? Better'n that—there's thrins in there, sir! Yes, sir, three of 'em—thrins b'gosh."

At another time Professor Matthews received a note, badly scrawled, from one of his patients which as near as he could recall read something like this: "Dear Doc: I am afraid I am going to have this here pendensitis, as I have symptoms along that line of disease. Please keep mum about it before my wife if I have got it when you come, for she thinks that pendensitis means fatal death sure."

Wine On the Railroads

With the placing of California wine on the wine card of the Pennsylvania Railroad's dining car service all the great railroads of the American continent north of the Mexican boundary now offer to the patrons of their dining cars the red and white bottled wines of the Golden State. The Canadian Pacific has been using these wines for some time past and not long ago the Canadian Northern began to offer them in its dining cars. The great overland systems, with the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe in the lead, have had them on their wine list for a good many years. It was their patronage of the California vintages, together with their excellent quality and the convenience and ease in handling the bottled packages that has led to their gradual adoption practically everywhere on this continent north of Mexico where a dining car is in use and where there is no prohibition of local option to stop their sale. The nature and extent of this use is a distinct triumph for makers and purveyors of California wines. It has not been so many years ago that doubting Thomases thought this feat could not be accomplished, or, if it could be, it would be a long time in the realization.

Taught Hotel Man Manners

Alfred Henry Lewis of New York, the well-known newspaper correspondent, magazine writer and author of a life of President Andrew Jackson, taught Mike Golden, the proprietor and manager of the Golden Hotel at Reno, Nev., a little manners in his hostelry the day before the big fight. Lewis was a guest at the hotel. On the morning of July 3d he rang for a bellboy to take his shoes down stairs to be polished. Two hours went by and no shoes appeared in sight. Lewis walked downstairs in his slippers, sought out Golden and made an emphatic protest about the way he was being treated.

"Go and ask a policeman for your shoes," was the flippant reply of the hotel man.

Lewis, who is a stout, active man, grabbed Golden by the nape of the neck, saying at the same time, "I think it is about time for some one to teach you some manners and I'll undertake to do the much-needed job."

With that Lewis proceeded to give Golden a good shaking. People about interfered and Golden broke away, remarking, "I'll see about your shoes." In a few minutes the footgear was obtained. Lewis went back to his room, dressed leisurely and during the remainder of his stay at the Golden hostelry had his wants fairly well attended to.

Had to Pay the Note

Sidelights on the collapse of J. Downey Harvey's Ocean Shore Railroad are beginning to crop out. Several years ago the Mercantile Trust Company advanced the railroad company $120,000 on a note made out in its own name and indorsed by J. Downey Harvey, Charles Carpy, J. A. Folger and C. C. Moore, individually and as directors of the company. The bank demanded the unpaid part of the note the other day, amounting to $85,000, and C. C. Moore paid the entire sum out of his own pocket. Harvey sunk his fortune of $750,000 in the road and the bank saw no chance of getting anything from him. J. Athera Folger has a large business here conducted under his name and his wife is reputed to be worth over a million. Folger sunk something like $300,000 in the road. Why the bank could not get any money out of him to help pay the note is not known. Charles Carpy, also for some reason, got out of paying anything on the note. Why, it is difficult to say. Moore was looked to by the bank as the man with the most ready money and he paid the obligation instead of resorting to legal delays. Now Moore has attached Charles Carpy's property to help reimburse himself. Harvey presumably has nothing to attach. There is nothing in the railroad Moore an attach, for that is an asset for the bondholders. Moore is seeking to attach some of Folger's property to help reimburse himself in addition to the Carpy attachment. Attached to the note as collateral were 150 bonds of the road. Moore got them when he paid the note. Their value is problematic, everything depending upon the fate of the road at its public auction next September. What he will get out of Carpy and Folger remains to be seen. Recently Carpy resigned from the presidency of the French Bank ostensibly to go to Europe for his health. He is still in town and people are wondering if he quit the bank presidency because of that $120,000 note obligation and in expectation of the Moore attachment. Moore is one of the most prominent business factors and men of affairs in the city. It was he who went to Europe and was so successful in interesting foreigners in the famed Portola festival of last year.

Lawyer and the Lady

While Mrs. Esther E. Deforest, wife of J. Douglass Deforest, the wealthy New York stock broker, is in Reno establishing a legal residence for the purpose of procuring a divorce, D. H. Wilson, a well-known attorney of Los Angeles, has been around the Palace Hotel showing friends a photograph of himself and Mrs. Deforest which they posed for in Reno. Mrs. Deforest is a beautiful woman who displays rare taste in dress and can afford to satisfy that taste, costly as it is. Her father is a lumber king back East and is most liberal in his allowances to his daughter. Rumor is persistent that she and Wilson hope to get married some day. However that may be, she has been in his company considerable of late, both in Reno and this city. A few nights ago at the Palace Wilson could not conceal his agitated feelings when he heard a report that Mrs. Deforest had been drowned in the Truckee river at Reno. Not until he had obtained an authentic denial of the report would he be calmed. It was while in his agitated frame of mind that he showed the picture of the lady and himself, which he was carrying in his pocket. Wilson has many friends here and they marvel at his unconcealed infatuation in view of her and his own family connections.

Orchids and Society

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Coryell have gone on a protracted tour of Europe. The female member of the family went away with happy and pleased thoughts. It may appear strange to say it, but nevertheless it is true that in the case of the Coryells the orchid, that beautiful, singular and costly flower, has helped them gain entrance into society and also get praise from a poet, George Sterling, who in Ambrose Bierce places high among living writers of English poetry; he whose praises are being sung just now far and wide for his sonnet on ruined Egypt, in which occurs the striking line, "The skull of Pharaoh staring at the sky," has fallen captive to the Coryell orchids. His latest volume of poems, "The House of Orchids," is dedicated to Mrs. Coryell. Wonderful in both their quality and profusion are the orchids of the Coryell country home at San Mateo. They constitute a veritable show place. Liberal gifts of them, combined with exceptional tact, constituted the entering wedge by which his charming woman finally managed to get into society. This lady was at one time an unheralded actress, and when, with her husband, she first went to live close to the exclusive set at San Mateo the social atmosphere was chilly. But time and orchids, also an unfailing well of tact, turned the social trick very neatly. That the orchid may become the family crest of the Coryells is not cause, therefore, for the least surprise.

Fall of the Bastille Ball

The Fall of the Bastille ball at the Auditorium was like one of the old time rollicking affairs of years ago. During the late hours champagne was extravagantly used and made dancing an hilarious delight. Many left at the midnight hour. Many more of both sexes made the time pass swiftly until the sun was almost up. To use the society editor's expression, "Among those present" were a lot of familiar names in professional and business circles. There was quite a mishap when along towards 3 o'clock in the morning Colonel ———— danced with a creation in blue and white silk, a fetching hat and costly and tasty hosiery. By some unforseen accident a pretty stocking became detached from clasp and out fell some currency and coin. There was a rush in the direction of the jingling sound. The gallant tin soldier, the hero of many a laughing water engagement, gave full perfection to his pretty tipsy partner. He gathered all the scattered money and escorted her in his slight deshabille off the floor. Mrs. ————, who has more money than social position, was in evidence with her new husband, formerly her chauffeur. After madam had quaffed liberally of the sparkling wine, she was not averse to telling those who drank with her of her recent courtship and marriage. She had been enamored of her chauffeur for some months. One day, she said, she made bold to say to him, "Charles, you have very fine teeth, and where did you get such lovely eyes?"

Then she gave a merry laugh, not loud, but one indicative of much enjoyment. Laughing again, she continued, "I asked Charles if he would like to kiss me. 'Certainly, I would,' he said to me and took the hand I held out to him. Ugh! I snatched my hand away and sent him about his business. Thrice I asked him if he would like to kiss me and three times snatched my hand away. His finger nails were awful. It took a long time for him to take the hint. In time he got to be properly groomed clear down the alphabet, and then we got married. Yes—Charles, stop winking at me. The story is true and you can't deny it."

Charles, as she called him, ordered more wine for the crowd and they all had a laugh at his expense, as well as the drink.

The Japanese Girl

Mrs. T. Akahoshi, wife of a young Japanese diplomat and pronounced one of the prettiest of Japanese women, has been made much of at the Fairmont Hotel during the past few days by some society people who happened to be in town. In looks, figure, dress and manner the young woman is certainly most attractive. Educated at Vassar, Mrs. Akahoshi has imbibed much of the American spirit, or what the French would call chic. To several of the woman guests at the Fairmont she talked quite interestingly about the young women of her own country. While Japan has felt much of the influences of Occidental civilization, the latter has not yet succeeded in introducing in every-day life among Japanese men and women its expressions, with all that they imply, of "My dear," "My darling" and "Sweetheart." As much now as ever was the case, this American-educated young woman, now on her way home from a six months' tour of Europe and the East with her husband, says a refined Japanese never speaks about his wife, or even his children. If by chance he does speak about a member of his family, it is only about his parents. The further drift of her conversation was that the refined girl of her country is trained to be at the mercy of her husband and parents-at-law. She is taught never to show jealousy, grief or anger. By mere sweetness she is expected to conquer the faults of her husband and her mother-in-law.

California Naval Militia

Rear Admiral Phelps and other naval officers in the city are unstinted in their praise of the efficiency of the California naval militia as evidenced by its recent trip to Puget Sound ports in the Marblehead. There were 233 men of the naval militia on the Marblehead on its trip north, commanded by Captain George W. Bauer. There was not a hitch on the outward or homeward voyage. Guns were handled in tiptop shape and all other duties aboard a warship performed in regulation style, showing great progress of the militia since the day it had the smaller vessels, Marion and Alert, and reflecting credit upon Governor Gillett and his Adjutant-General, J. B. Lauck, who have all along shown intelligent interest in the men's work and that of Captain Bauer on their behalf. The State officials of Washington visited the Marblehead while it was at Seattle and were enthusiastic in their praise of the men and their captain. They are soon to get the Cheyenne for the use of the Washington naval militia. It is worth while remembering that the naval militia of California is the only body of its kind in the country which goes on sea voyages without regular naval officers assisting.

Hays and the Big Strike

Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk railroad, who has a big strike and lockout on his system, was president of the Southern Pacific here for about a year following the death of C. P. Huntington. The bankers Speyers, of New York and London, put him in the position, side-tracking Henry E. Huntington for that purpose in order to get a stronger hold on the property. Hays intended to make many official changes here, but only succeeded in forcing out General Superintendent Jerome A. Fillmore and Charles Wallace, or Black Wallace, as he was generally known, the company's resident agent in Nevada for many years and a life-long friend of Senator "Bill" Stewart. Senator Newlands of Nevada got Hays to "fire" Wallace, who, like Fillmore, died shortly afterwards. Hays had to get out when H. H. Harriman came into the control of the company by buying through Edwin Hawley the latter's Southern Pacific stock and that of H. E. Huntington and C. P. Huntington's widow. This coup on the part of Harriman destroyed the influence of the Speyers in the property. That is why Hays had to go. The Speyers then put Hays back on the Grand Trunk, from where they had obtained him, and he has been there ever since. Hays is originally from St. Louis and the Wabash road. Unlike Van Horn and Shaughnessy, two successful American railroad men on the Canadian Pacific, Hays has declined to be knighted by the British King. Recently he gave three free scholarships in McGill University, Montreal, open to employees of his road under twenty-one years of age, or the young sons of employees.

Grass Widow Wins Husband

The aftermath of a church wedding about three years ago is to be a divorce suit on the ground of desertion. But that is not the real cause of the domestic tragedy. The husband is well known in this town, enjoys a salary of $500 a month and has a wife and baby. The wife's claim, a grass widow, also young and fair to look upon, has won the affections of the hubby. The latter has admitted to his better half the state of his heart and told her he cannot live without his new charmer. In her trouble the wronged wife has had the assistance of the former husband of the grass widow and his mother. A detective has gathered strong evidence sufficient to warrant a divorce case, with the grass widow as co-respondent. The latter's former husband and mother-in-law have aided the wife to get $5000 in cash from the husband and a bond from him guaranteeing to pay on account of herself and child $175 a month. The wife on her part has agreed to sue for a divorce for desertion only. The papers in the case will no doubt be filed this week in the Superior Court.

Inviting and Harboring Pestilence.

Of late years San Antonio, Texas, has been widely advertised as having a climate favorable to the cure of pulmonary complaints. In consequence thousands of consumptives—many of them in the last stages of tuberculosis—have flocked to the place in the forlorn hope that nature will make them well. At first the inhabitants of San Antonio welcomed the stricken new-comers; they brought money into the country, created new business and swelled the population. A certain sort of prosperity followed, and for a time the people of San Antonio rejoiced that their city had become a popular resort for invalids suffering from throat and lung diseases.

But that rejoicing is ended. There were penalties attached to the influx of tubercular patients which were not at first appreciated and were for a time minimized. The consumptive immigrants swelled the death rate and created widespread infection among the resident population. Many afflicted were dumped on the community by unfeeling relatives and friends, and became a burden to the public after their money was exhausted. They had to be cared for and buried at the expense of the public. The presence of so many tubercular patients became a problem to the authorities. The hotels found them undesirable since they spread infection and drove away healthy patrons.

San Antonio's death rate has become the highest of any city in Texas. It was formerly one of the healthiest cities in the world, having a pure, dry atmosphere, good water and a well-drained site resting upon a limestone formation. But the population has doubled in ten years, and sanitary improvements have not kept pace with the increase of inhabitants. As a result the city has been given an unpleasant prominence in health reports and vital statistics records.

To this fact the people of San Antonio are just waking up. They find that it puts a financial handicap on San Antonio; it is keeping away people of the better class who would like to invest and build homes there but for the sinister warning conveyed by the mortality reports. The problem is how to deal with the tubercular invasion, discourage it and turn it aside so that San Antonio will once more occupy an enviable place in health reports. It is a difficult problem to solve. But the situation can be improved by installing a modern sanitary sewage system and requiring all closets to be connected with it. Regulations to prevent the spread of tuberculosis in the schools and other places of general assemblage will assist in decreasing the mortality and restoring the standard of health. But the tubercular infection imported by consumptives can only be arrested by stopping the influx, and a long, vigorous, intelligent and expensive campaign to segregate and finally stamp it out.

San Antonio is having the experience that Los Angeles passed through not so many years ago. For a time that city, one of the healthiest in the world, cried "Come to Los Angeles and be cured of tuberculosis." The invitation brought invalids by the thousands. They filled the hotels, then the sanatoriums and hospitals and finally the cemeteries. The death toll assumed ominous proportions and the hacking cough conveyed its dismal warning all over the city. Then Los Angeles began to repel the invasion and keep the infected out of the hotels. Her fine climate, good drainage and system of sewage disposal have enabled her to fight off the scourge she invited, but tuberculosis is still too dreadfully common in the Southern metropolis. However, Los Angeles has ceased to invite consumptives to come and be cured. San Antonio has now made the discovery that Los Angeles made twenty years ago. It is a discovery that will benefit those suffering from pulmonary diseases as well as the interests of the city. Nothing can be worse for the ailing and the well than for sufferers from tuberculosis particularly if the malady be in its last stages, to herd together in one place. They breed pestilence and make their own affliction more terrible and less possible of cure.

It is a mercy to prevent the congregation of consumptives in particular places under conditions which negative proper care and treatment and which expose great numbers of healthy people to infection. Climate alone will not cure tuberculosis. Climate will help throw the disease, but the chief factors of cure are regimen, hygiene, sanitation and a manner of living that will give nature the most effective aid in working a restoration. It is wrong to permit sleeping cars, hotels, schools and other public places to be polluted by tubercular infection. It does no good to the afflicted and spreads broadcast the seeds of disease, suffering and death. Stern measures to prevent the sick from mixing promiscuously with the well may seem at first glance to be inhuman, but they are not; on the contrary, they combine humanity with wisdom. The sick should be cared for and cured if possible, but that is no reason why whole communities of well people should be inoculated with the most insidious and deadly malady known to the human race. There is neither sense nor mercy in permitting the infected to wander over the country, seeking in crowds the companionship of the afflicted, the ignis fatuus of relief by mere change of climate.

We quarantine against bubonic plague, smallpox, typhus, yellow fever, etc., yet we permit the most deadly of all diseases to be spread without let or hindrance. If given his choice any person would choose typhus, yellow fever or smallpox in preference to tuberculosis. In most cases tuberculosis is a lingering death that spreads sorrow, suffering and want, not to say deadly infection, among those near and dear to the patient. Society should prevent this if possible. The possibility lies in segregation. Misdirected humanity has poisoned the healthiest localities in the world and spread tuberculosis in lands and among peoples where it was once unknown. Los Angeles and San Antonio are melancholy examples of this fact. The South of France is the most pitiable of all. Yet we continue to suffer this terrible menace to be carried about as if it were not to be feared or guarded against.

Speaking of the failure of the so-called Good Government League to endorse Judge Samuel's for police judge, a morning paper tries to make it appear that Supervisor Joseph M. Kelley's friends are in some way responsible for the turnaround given Judge Samuel's. Supervisor Kelley does not affiliate with the self-styled Good Government League, and therefore could not influence the endorsements made by that organization. He is and always has been a warm friend of Judge Samuel's. When City Attorney Stetson resigned the justiceship it was up to the Board of Supervisors to appoint his successor. Supervisor Kelley was largely instrumental in having Judge Samuel's appointed, nominating him before the board. No other candidate was named because Supervisors Hörner and Mitchell had agreed with Supervisor Kelley to elect Judge Samuel's. It was not Supervisor Kelley's friends, but his enemies that jockeyed Judge Samuel's out of the Good Government League nomination. Now these same enemies are trying to make it appear that Supervisor Kelley, who is a regular Republican, is in some roundabout way responsible for the effort given the Hebrew voters by the defeat of Judge Samuel's. It is a case of artful dodging to evade the consequences, the defeat of Judge Samuel's having excited deep indignation among his co-religionists.

Great Hymns and Their Authors

"Awake, My Soul"—By Philip Doddridge

Awake, my soul, stretch every nerve,
And press with vigor on;
A heavenly race demands thy zeal,
And an immortal crown.

A cloud of witnesses around
Hold thee in full survey;
Forget the steps already trod,
And onward urge thy way.

'Tis God's all-animating voice
That calls thee from on high;
'Tis His own hand presents the prize
To thine aspiring eye.

That prize with peerless glories bright,
Which shall new lustre boast;
When victors' wreaths and martyr's gems
Shall blend in common dust.

Bless Saviour, introduced by Thee,
Have I my race begun;
And, crowned with victory, at Thy feet,
I'll lay my honors down.

Of the many lofty souls of the Christian Church who have been inspired by their devotional muse to write hymns, one of the most conspicuous in history is Dr. Philip Doddridge. He had not the marvelous fecundity in this work of Charles Wesley, whose hymns numbered 6000, but still he had 374 to his credit. Those of real and substantial merit have been winnowed from the chaff, and will long survive, like Wesley's good ones. While Doddridge lived his hymns were circulated in manuscript, not being printed until 1758, four years after his death. There is a wide scope, from high to low, in their forms of literary expression, and a varying quality in their spirituality of thought, which if allowed to pass unimpaired might in the end have sunk a good many of them forever, but the hymn-writers, recognizing their right to life, set to work on them to such good purpose that a large number have been preserved to delight the minds and souls of Christian worshippers.

Doddridge ranks next to Charles Wesley and Isaac Watts in the number of his hymns in common use, and these constitute about one-third of all he wrote. They are largely used by the Unitarians in Great Britain and America. The Congregationalists draw freely, and the Baptists come next. The Church of England has selected the choicest for its use.

The favorite Doddridge hymn of Dr. David Livingstone, the famous African missionary and explorer, was that beginning,

"O God of Bethel by whose hand Thine Israel still is fed."

It was sung at Livingstone's funeral when he was buried in Westminster Abbey, April 18, 1874.

Dr. Doddridge had a wonderfully lovable and trusting character. This temperament was manifest in everything he did and wrote. It made him happy everywhere, in all places and under all conditions. When he was studying for the ministry at Kibworth in 1740, at the age of 18, a friend wrote him from London, where he was born and had lived, sympathizing with him on being "buried" in so obscure a village. He replied:

"I live like a prince—not, indeed, in the pomp of greatness, but the pride of liberty; master of my book, master of my time, and, I hope I may add, master of myself. I can willingly give up the charms of London. So that, instead of lamenting it as my misfortune, you should congratulate me upon it as my happiness."

One of his own hymns, "Awake My Soul to Meet the Day," was in the habit of repeating as his daily devotion when rising from slumber each morning. He was an early riser, five o'clock being his hour and on reaching the sixth stanza of this hymn he left his bed.

His complete submersion in spiritual happiness is disclosed in a letter, quoted by his biographers, written in 1742, from Northampton to his wife, in which he naively told her he hoped she would not be offended if he said that which "he had hardly thought possible without a miracle," viz., he was "very easy and happy without her." Then he went on to tell how delightful was his life. And "the reason, the great and sufficient reason, is," he added, "that I have more of the presence of God with me than I remember ever to have enjoyed in any one month of my life."

Doddridge was the son of a London oil merchant, and was born June 26, 1702. He was offered an education by the Duchess of Bedford, to equip him for the Church of England ministry, but this he declined, and entered Jennings' non-conformist seminary at Kibworth. During his career he prepared about 200 pupils for the ministry, most of them Dissenters.

He became pastor of the Congregational Church at Northampton, and principal of the Theological Academy there. His book on the "Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul," like his hymns, still renders good service in the cause for which it was written. The author died October 26, 1751, in Lisbon. He said at one time to his pupils at Northampton that if he could have his wish as to his last words they would be these lines by Watts:

"A guilty, weak and helpless worm,
On Thy kind arms I fall."

STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE

Lord Beauchamp, who succeeded his father as eighth holder Viscount Wolverhampton as lord of the earldom when he was 13, and president of the council, is one of the most versatile of peers. He succeeded his father as eighth holder of the earldom when he was 13, and shortly after coming of age was a member of the London school board and mayor of Worcester. At 27 he became governor-general of New South Wales, and there was noted, among other things, for the exclusiveness of his official entertainments. The story goes that for one function he issued tickets of different colors

Oakland Among Beautiful Cities

(From Rochester, N. Y. Herald.)

A. W. North, a prominent attorney, magazine writer and author from Salt Lake City, arrived in Rochester yesterday to attend the Playground Congress. North is a grandson of Thomas H. Hyatt, a Rochester pioneer who was editor and owner of the first daily newspaper printed in Rochester, the Daily Adventurer, which first saw the light of day October 26, 1826.

While editor of this paper Mr. Hyatt was appointed United States consul at Amoy, China.

Attorney North is in Rochester for the purpose of making a study of the playgrounds here, and is getting ideas for this work at the session of the congress. According to Mr. North, Salt Lake City has no playgrounds, but the municipal authorities in the Mormon capital are planning to establish them at an early date and accordingly Attorney North is here to get information.

To a reporter of the Herald, Mr. North said yesterday that he considered this one of the four most beautiful cities in America. "Rochester," said he, "Washington, Cleveland and Oakland, California, are in my opinion the four most beautiful cities in America."

Twenty Years Ago in Oakland

Max Laurence, the German comedian, makes his first appearance in English in this city this evening, when he will appear in "Tip Van Winkle" at the Oakland theater.

John Barrows, whose home has been at 824 Magnolia street, died this morning. For a number of years he conducted the Fairmont Hotel in this city. The remains will be forwarded to Albany, Ore., for interment.

James A. Johnson has entered into a contract with George W. Frick by which the latter agrees to construct two frame dwellings at the corner of East Fourteenth street and Seventh avenue. The cost of the improvement is to be $6220.

A. A. Moore Jr. and William H. Richardson have gone on a thirty days' trip to Tacoma.

There was an attempt made to effect a compromise in the Third ward on the Jordan-Morrow fight for the convention Saturday next, but the attempt failed of success. As a consequence, the contest on Saturday will be a straight issue, Morrow vs. Marquand, the Marquand side strong for Jordan, the Morrow side willing to be, but what they do.

In Alameda a ticket will be put in the field for the state convention bearing the names of T. G. Daniels, J. A. Waymire, J. N. Young, W. P. Jones and R. B. Tappan. This ticket seems likely to be successful, though W. A. Bissell is making a fight to get to Sacramento as a delegate.

P. J. Keller says that nine-tenths of the Republicans in Piedmont are in favor of a ticket with Morrow at the head.

The Loria Republican Club agreed to allow all the Republicans from the bay district to vote in the selection of a delegation to the state convention and nominated J. A. Gelder as that delegate.

Congressman Morrow writes from Washington that he does not see how he can get away from Congress before the adjournment of the session. E. C. Sessions, president of the Oakland, Brooklyn and Fruitvale Street Car Company, as also president of the Oakland Bank of Savings, has been granted a patent on a new street car which has a deck on the roof, on which passengers can ride.

Next Sunday Rev. Dr. Forton will officiate at the First Presbyterian church for the last time. The doctor and his wife will be tendered a reception in the church parlors next Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Campbell are spending the summer in Athabasca Valley.

Peter Jackson, the colored prize fighter, will go to Australia Saturday and Sam Fitzpatrick will go with him. George C. Gaskill has been appointed.

CURIOUS BOOKS

The largest bound book ever made was owned by Queen Victoria. It weighed 63 pounds and 18 inches thick.

For the Hebrew Bible in the Vatican in 1312 the Jews offered Pope Julius II its weight in gold—$100,000—but the Pope would not part with it.

More expensive even, if not more valuable, is the official history of the war of the rebellion issued by the United States Government at a cost of nearly $3,000,000. Nearly one-half of this amount was paid for printing and binding and the rest for salaries, rent, stationery and such expenses as purchasing records from private individuals. It was ten years in the making, consisting of 114 volumes.

A set of 5020 volumes in the Chinese department of the British Museum constitutes the largest book in the world. It is an encyclopedia of the literature of China from 1000 B. C. to 1700 A. D., a period of twenty-eight centuries. The work in England was purchased for $8000, being one of the three copies in existence. It was forty years in compilation and was ordered by Emperor Kang-Hsi, who reigned from 1662 to 1722.

The smallest book in the world, not much larger than a man's thumbnail, was made in Italy, the text being a letter, before unpublished, written by the inventor of the pendulum clock to Mme. Christine of Lorraine in 1615. It is four-tenths of an inch long, a quarter of an inch wide, contains 208 pages, each with nine lines, and from 95 to 100 letters. Next smallest is an edition of Dante's "Divine Comedy," a little less than an inch wide, with type so small that it takes a microscope to read the letters.

The lady's anger rose, and she paralyzed the flunkey by exclaiming: "I'll let them see that my husband and I are not a selditch powder!"—Tit-Bits.

It isn't difficult to please people who know what they want.

LADY PAGET DISPLAYS SKILL AT POKER BLUFF

Wins Jackpot From Judge Gary and James B. Duke With the Limit Set at Sum of $250

(By A. J. LAMBERT.)

LONDON, July 23.—Lady Paget, who has lost neither her American accent nor her love for the people or customs of her birth country, has been astonishing London with her exclusive and fashionable poker parties. All society has been discussing one remarkable poker game of which she was the giver and to which she gathered several big trust interests and laughingly proved that while they might know more about trade combinations she was far more skillful at poker. It was a "sniff game" all Jackpots, with a $250 limit. The trust interests participating were all represented by George Miller of California; steel by E. H. Gary; tobacco, by James B. Duke and the feminine side by Mrs. W. E. Leeds. There was intense amusement with Lady Paget won pot after pot and finally raised in the biggest pot of the evening with a "busted flush" making several of the trust magnates throw down excellent hands. As a consequence Lady Paget is receiving constant and pressing demands to organize more of these delightful American parties and pokerists threaten to become a revived craze.

WOMEN GATHER.

At the Ritz this week there has been a gathering of American women who spend considerable time of the year in Paris, the objects being to vent their indignation and devise reprisals as a result for what is termed the social trait of Paris controlled by Mrs. George Murray and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt. From what is learned the recent season in Paris created considerable bitterness as entrance into exclusive French society by Americans was seemingly unobtainable without the O. K. of either Mrs. Vanderbilt or Mrs. Murray.

What is particularly galling is that this control is extended, it is stated, to the American embassy where invitations are not extended to exclusive functions unless upon the say-so of these two ladies. The gathering did not evolve, any definite scheme, someone expressing the hopelessness of the situation by asking "what can you do about it?"

There was a striking and beautiful imitation American frock entertained at a recent cocktail given by Mrs. Vincent, an extremely wealthy lady of honor and niece of Speaker Lovett.

After the first figure, wherein only six picked couples participated, the music stopped and there was wheeled into the room a huge basket of flowers. Suddenly the flowers fell apart and out jumped Miss Pavlova, the famous Russian dancer.

Between every figure of the co-throned either Pavlova or her male partner, M. Mordkin danced, receiving $300 for each number, making the total cost of the entertainment one of the most expensive in London.

During the first number, owing to the absence of music on the floor Pavlova slipped but did not injure herself, the hostess explaining cheerfully: "If she had injured her ankle I would have been obliged to pension her with thousands of pounds. How fortunate!"

One notable feature of the party was that the thirty-five couples were not selected for beauty or smartness but for their personality, the hostess announcing that she wanted men and women with brains which is a new note in English society.

The coming marriage of Miss Clara Brown to Richard Sheridan in October will mark the fourth union of a quartet of one season American girls who were the closest chums, namely Miss Drexel, now Lady Maitland, Miss Mifflin Carter, now Lady Acheson, and Miss Nellie Post, now Mrs. Elliot.

Upon the announcement of the engagement of Miss Brown, both the crown princess and her sister, Princess Patricia of Connaught sent long and affectionate letters of congratulation. She has stayed twice with the crown princess and the last time she visited Stockholm the king invested her with the Order of the Innocence.

The intimacy which has existed between Miss Brown and the Connaught princess is due to the great influence exerted by Mrs. Jack Leslie, who is Miss Brown's aunt. Mrs. Leslie for years was known as the American lady in waiting to the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall. They were devoted to her, consulting her on all possible subjects. Miss Brown's other aunt, Miss George Cornwallis-West, is delighted with the engagement.

STRIKE IS CALLED BY HODCARRIERS

Request of Men That Time Be Cut Refused by Employers.

Differences have arisen between the hod-carriers and the contractors over a demand for a shorter work day. The hod-carriers demand a reduction of eight and one-half hours to eight hours. Both the contracting masons and plasterers, through their associations, have refused to concede the demand, insisting on a continuance of the present conditions. The hod-carriers have the endorsement of the Building Trades Council.

Under existing conditions the hod-carriers start work twenty minutes before 8 o'clock to prepare the mortar and plaster for bricklayers and plasterers so that these mechanics may start promptly on their jobs. The hod-carriers also resume work after lunch ten minutes before the masons and plasterers. For their eight and one-half hours the hod-carriers for masons receive $4 a day and $5 when working for plasterers. The hod-carriers want a half hour cut from their day.

The Building Trades Council has agreed as a compromise that the eight hours be granted, but that half the force start mixing the materials twenty minutes before 8 and ten minutes before 1 o'clock, quitting at 4:30 o'clock, half an hour before the bricklayers and other mechanics.

The contractors met yesterday at the Builders' Exchange on Jessie street and reiterated their stand not to concede the demand and will stop building operations until a settlement is made of the controversy. At a special meeting of the Hod-Carriers' Union yesterday afternoon the Building Trades Council of Electrical Workers' The increase of the day's work to ten hours was granted. The new agreement affects all the electricians from in this city to central California cities. About 1000 men are benefited. The new wage for electricians will be $4.25 and for foremen $5 a day.

The Labor Council Friday night referred resolutions requesting that card dates for the legislature be pledged for certain measures, including endorsement of a national income tax, direct legislation and election of United States Senators by vote of the people to its law and legislative committee.

The wage scale of the Barbers' Union was referred back to the organization for rearrangement, on the ground that the same calls for a commission proposition, which was considered more favorable from an employer's than from a wage earner's standpoint.

A donation of $25 was made to the Native Sons' celebration fund.

Secretary Gallagher submitted a report of a conference with the officers of the State Brewers' Association and the Knights of the Royal Arch regarding the Los Angeles brewery workers' strike and the demand that efforts be made for a settlement on penalty of a call for a referendum for prohibition in case of refusal.

A request of the local Bond and Shoe-workers' Union for financial aid for the men on strike at the factory of Cain, Nicksburg & Co. was granted. It was stated that the International Shoe-workers' Union has withdrawn its support, because of a refusal of the strikers to return to work with strikebreakers and to receive them into the union.

Sleepy Prisoner Settles His Fine

LONDON, July 23.—After sleeping while he was waiting to be charged, Arthur Henry Kemp, a ship's fireman, maintained a very disinterested attitude when his case was heard at Willesden police court.

He had to be aroused before being placed in the dock, then leaned wearily over the side, yawned at frequent intervals, and when asked if he had any questions to ask lazily answered, "No; it's not worth while."

Fined $2.50 for being drunk and using bad language, Kemp wearily produced the amount of his fine and strolled leisurely out of court.

FRANCE IS WORRIED OVER CONDITION OF ITS MEN

Physical Deterioration Is Deplored by Newspapermen and Athletes.

EFFORTS BEING MADE TO FIND A REMEDY

Former Minister Clemonceau Goes On Tour As a Lecturer.

(By GEORGE DUFFEL SNE.)

PARIS, July 23.—That the population of France is decreasing is not the only worry of French statesmen. They also deplore the physical deterioration of the young men of France of today, and there is a general cry just now for a compulsory course of physical training for all French children.

As is quite common in France, where football is more alive and up-to-date than in any other country in the world, with the possible exception of America, it is a patriotic journalist, the well-known author, M. Victor Marguerite, who has started the movement which is to give to France a vigorous and alert new generation to uphold the glorious tradition of their country.

A series of excellently written articles by M. Marguerite in Le Journal have aroused the enthusiastic support of thousands of eminent physicians all over France, who agree with the writer that physical training, with the resulting love of healthy manly sport, is to be the salvation of France.

NEED OF TRAINING.

How great is the need of physical training is shown by the fact that 55,000 Frenchmen are every year declared to be totally unfit for military service.

Recently the gymnastic societies and shooting clubs have increased throughout the country. A healthy craze for sport has set in. While, however, these are encouraging signs of the times, they are not enough. What is wanted is that physical training should be given according to a method. The thing which is favored in some quarters, but is detested by others on the ground, an ancient, that it is a Swedish rather than a French system.

The Joinville school, which has adopted this method, is doing excellent work in training army officers on scientific principles, imparting knowledge of the human body and the physiological effects of movement. The normal school at Pau for the training of women teachers has also adopted the Swedish method with eminently satisfactory results. M. Victor Marguerite suggests that what has been done at Pau should be imitated all over France, believing that the result would be a race of strong Frenchmen.

CLEMONCEAU ON TOUR.

The former Prime Minister, M. Clemonceau, has just started on tour as a lecturer. He will give six lectures at Buenos Ayres and Montevideo, and a series of lectures in Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, and Chile. He will also visit Brazil.

The program of his tour is copious and solid. He will give six lectures at Buenos Ayres and Montevideo, and a series of lectures in Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, and Chile. He will also visit Brazil.

M. Clemonceau says that he has not written a word of his lecture. He will speak on every occasion, and will not from notes which his secretaries have prepared. He is at work on a book on democracy and will be presumed to be fairly well up on his subject.

His tour, like any prima donna's, is managed by a J. J. G. and the terms will come favorably with those given to operate stars. His contract assures him $2000 for each lecture and all his expenses. He will be away three months, but he will be able to prolong his trip by a much longer if he should be invited to lecture in the United States, a country he is exceedingly interested in, so there is a splendid chance for some enterprising American impresario.

REJOICES ON ONE VOTE.

Mine host Michel Pons is a poet who keeps a wine-shop near the Central Markets. At one of the recent elections to the French Academy, one vote was recorded for him. I was only one, but it was a genuine vote, and Pons, the poet and barman, has rejoiced ever since.

Who of the Immortals voted for him? The Academy, but Pons made a shrewd guess. Mr. Maurice Bares, writer and Academician, is a member of Parliament for the neighborhood of which Pons keeps the wine shop. He serves his customers with a little knowing what he is doing. He writes his verses. Now Pons at the polls has always voted for Mr. Bares, and makes no secret of it. One good turn deserves another, and he feels sure that the one vote for his name at the Academy must have been recorded by Mr. Bares. He determined to thank him, and invited him to a wine party. Mr. Bares went with pleasure, little knowing what was awaiting him. In the wine-shop stood something on an easel. Pons uncovered a bronze medalion of Mr. Bares, with his inscription, "To the Academy, from Michel Pons." The noble gesture was voting for Pons the poet at an Academy election.

It was an awkward moment for M. Bares. He may or may not have voted for Pons at the Academy, but he had not bargained for being publicly thanked by him. The rest of the Immortals might hardly appreciate the attention paid to the winekeeper-poet. But M. Bares got out of his difficulty as neatly as he could. He still would neither confirm nor deny the "noble gesture," but agreed in return for the medal which Pons had stung in his honor, to give him his portrait with the inscription, "To Michel Pons, the poet, from Maurice Bares." The Academician and deputy has set what may be an awkward precedent for himself. Every constituent of his who has ever written in prose or verse will stand for the Academy and expect to be backed by him, or will vote for an opposition candidate at the polls.

Pays Heavy Taxes; Makes It All Back

LONDON, July 21.—A Welsh landowner has taken a novel means of recouping himself after paying the heavy land taxes imposed by the famous budget of last year. He happens to own the road on the coast connecting the large seaside resorts of Colwyn Bay and Llandudno. Midway between the two places he has erected a toll gate, to pass which all vehicles must pay fees on a scale ranging up to one shilling. The traffic on this road being heavy, a large revenue is collected at the "budget toll gate," as the owner has named it.

LESSON IN AMERICAN HISTORY

THE BOSTON TEA PARTY—Find Samuel Adams

As the result of the landing of three ships in Boston harbor, loaded with tea, upon which England had fixed a duty, 200 men, clad in blankets and carrying hatchets, encouraged by Samuel Adams, poured pickets on the wharf to prevent the intrusion of spies, took possession of the three tea ships and emptied into the bay 340 chests of tea. All things were conducted with great order, decency and perfect submission to government. The people who looked on were so still that the noise of breaking open the tea chests was plainly heard.

The next morning a committee appointed Samuel Adams and four others to draw up a declaration of what had been done. They sent Paul Revere with the information to New York and Philadelphia.

MURDER THEORY OF RAWN'S DEATH COLLAPSES

Family of Dead Railway President Now Faces Legal Battle for Insurance.

VAST FRAUDS MAY INVOLVE BIG ESTATE

President Harahan of Illinois Central Says Monon Affairs Will Be Probed.

CHICAGO, July 23.—The murder theory of the death of Ira G. Rawn, president of the Monon railroad, utterly collapsed today despite the fact that the family offered $500,000 for the capture of his murderer. The family now faces a bitter court fight with the insurance companies to pay more than $100,000 of accident insurance which is void in case of suicide. Their main hope seems to lie in a verdict of accidental death from a coroner's jury, who will hold an inquest next Wednesday evening.

President J. T. Harahan of the Illinois Central railroad returned from New York today with the order of the board of directors to investigate the car repair and right-of-way graft to the fullest extent. The investigation will be postponed and it is possible that it will be probed to the last degree. Suits against his estate for retribution will depend on the extent of the responsibility established.

INSURANCE PEOPLE TO PROBE

A committee from the Chicago insurance companies who held a session today examined the reports of the railroads and the police. The committee is composed of representatives from the American, Commercial Union, and other insurance companies.

Ira G. Rawn, president of the Monon railroad, was shot and killed on the tracks near Chicago on July 19. The family offered a reward of $500,000 for the capture of his murderer. The insurance companies are now fighting to pay the insurance policy, which is void in case of suicide.

WALTER HALE TOURS EUROPE

Writes of His Experiences in the Valley of the Seine with His Studebaker.

The second of a series of letters from Walter Hale, the popular American actor now touring Europe in his Studebaker, deals with the beauties of the Seine valley and the quaint old French towns en route to Paris. To the American contemplating a tour of France, it will be of no little value, and it is the same time it is of a decided interest to every motorist and traveler. It follows:

The valley of the Seine is one of the most beautiful in the whole of France. The river permeates all sorts of variations as it flows down towards Paris but below its anti-aure is indescribable. It winds about like a snake, is a true canyoneer who takes the trouble to look at the map. We were reminded of this in France where we encountered the Lonesome American Chauffeur.

He was driving a big French car owned by his employer somewhere out West and I was proud of it. But still he couldn't keep his eyes off the "Studebaker" and hovered around as we were driving up and testing the engine before we started and made the start for Paris.

Geoffrey said it was lonely here, dog gone lonely and there's many a time I wish I was back with my bunch on up per Broadway.

It was here that the Playwright who was studying that other took occasion to change the subject and remark again that the Seine wound through the valley like a snake. I then remarked that the chauffeur, a full grown, respectable snake would plumb break his neck trying to swim up that river. At this he thus declared himself he followed us out of the garage and saw a good-bye as we turned into the main street that runs along the quay.

Rouen was on for that day before a great reception had been given to the American actor and his troupe. The "ship" in which he made a voyage but unsuccessful effort to reach the South Pole.

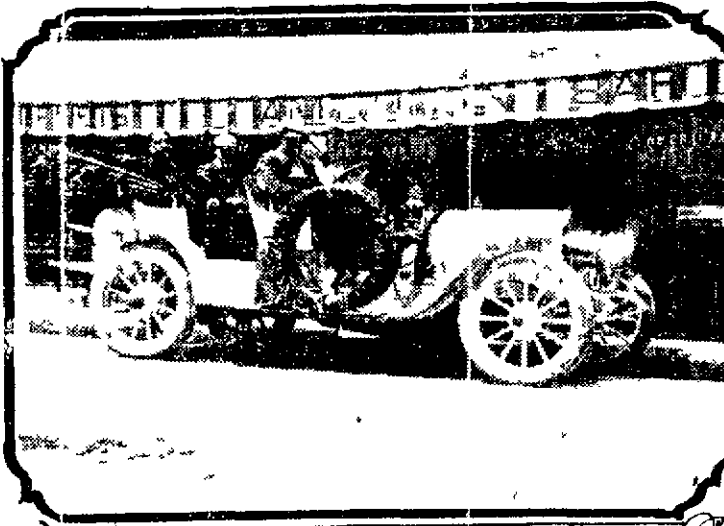

Again we left the Route Nationale and took the byways and the roads that were so narrow that once when we met a peasant in his cart we had to back up until we found a spot wide enough to give him room to pass. We stopped one beautiful Richard Coeur de Lion's Gav Castle. He built it with its most its outer walls its 11 foot walls, and the most impregnable don tower within in as strong a cast and for decades thereafter it commanded the valley and the river against the attacks of the French falling finally to Philip Augustus after a siege of five months.

Further up the Seine on the opposite bank is the town of Vernon with a very picturesque old Norman church and an American Bar which is kept by Mr. Charles LeRoy, who left New York thirty years ago and has never been back since. But he keeps up his interest in his native country and is only too glad to hang out the American flag on the slightest provocation.

NORTH BERKELEY TERRACE SALES

They Average Twenty-five Lots a Week for Some Time Past.

We no more than passed said Mr. Tappett of the Herderson Tapscott Company at the recent sale we are getting in North Berkeley Terrace. Notwithstanding the vacation period and the fact that it is the first two or three weeks we have averaged twenty-five lots every day.

The majority of our purchasers expect to start the construction of their homes at a very early date. Many of those who purchased on the outset bought for a home on the coast, and so far the sale has been very successful. The fact that the sale is so successful is a reflection on the quality of the property and the location of the homes.

The homes are located on a beautiful terrace overlooking the bay. The property is well developed and the homes are of a high quality. The sale is a success and the company is pleased with the results.

PLUCKY GIRLS END JOURNEY

Make Transcontinental Trip Unassisted and Arrive with Perfect Score.

(By J. A. HOUHAN)
Traveling by auto from his Atlantic to the Pacific coast having left New York City just two days is the remarkable feat accomplished by Miss Blanche Stewart Scott in an Overland car. She made a triumphal entry yesterday morning into Oakland accompanied by a "gentle" Overland admirer who had journeyed to San Francisco to meet her.

With only a month's vacation, Miss Scott and her companion, Miss Gert de Phillips, left New York City for a transcontinental tour. They traveled through the mountains and across the plains, making a perfect score on their journey. They arrived in Oakland yesterday morning, and their trip was a great success.

SANTA CRUZ TRIP VERY EXCITING

Mountain Roads Have Many Turns but Surrounded by Pretty Scenery.

(By J. A. HOUHAN)
For a single day's motor trip there is no trip of any kind in the state so exciting as the trip to Santa Cruz by way of Los Gatos. Leaving Oakland in the morning last at 6:30 the trip to Santa Cruz was a very exciting one. The road was full of turns and the scenery was very pretty. The trip was a great success and the drivers were very happy.

OLD RECORDS SHOW MOTOR CAR'S AGE

Literature of Stevens-Duryea Proves That It Was One of First Autos Built.

Interesting and in some cases highly amusing when read or looked back upon from the light of civilization has attained at the present day. An instance of this may be seen in the following reprints from early catalogues of the Stevens-Duryea Company, which have come to hand through the courtesy of A. B. Coogan, president of the Pacific Motor Car Company, distributor for the Stevens-Duryea of today.

In the spring of 1895 the catalogue with which the Stevens-Duryea was associated was completed. It followed the Stevens-Duryea catalogue of May 1894. Then came the Stevens-Duryea catalogue of 1895. These catalogues show the progress of the Stevens-Duryea company and the development of the motor car. The Stevens-Duryea was one of the first autos built and its history is a very interesting one.

CUT OFF SERMONS AND BUILT CHURCH

Modern Pastor Did Away with the Dogmatic, Benefits Accrue.

NEW YORK, July 23.—In the village of Bellport, L. I., there is a new Presbyterian pastor who believes in modern methods of saving souls. He is the Rev. J. B. Palmer, formerly of Fall River, Mass.

On taking up his charge last January, Mr. Palmer found that his congregation had been suffering with long, dry sermons. They had been of indeterminate length and those who attended the services could never tell within half an hour or so when the service would be over. Mr. Palmer decided to do something about it. He announced that from now on, the services would be of a definite length. He said that he would cut off the long sermons and build a church.

WINS BATTLE WITH LEPROSY

Scourge of Tropical Countries Losing Ground, Cure Is Near at Hand.

BURLIN, July 23.—Leprosy, that scourge of tropical countries, is slowly being conquered. The dawn of a brighter future is being seen. The cure is near at hand.

The disease has been known for centuries, but it has always been a mystery. It was thought to be a punishment from God, but now it is known to be a disease that can be cured. The cure is near at hand and the battle has been won.

Can This Man Read Your Life?

THEIR FUTURES WITH AMAZING ACCURACY

Free Test Readings Will Be Sent for a Short Time to All OAKLAND
TRIBUNE Readers.

Has the veil of mystery that has so long shrouded the ancient science been raised at last? Can it be that a system has been perfected that reveals with reasonable accuracy the character and disposition of an individual and so shows the life as to assist in avoiding errors and taking advantage of opportunities?

Recall a man who has for twenty years been delving into the mysteries of the occult, making a scientific study of the various methods of reading the lives of people, and who has reached a higher round in the ladder of fame than his predecessors. Letters are pouring into his office from all parts of the world telling of the benefits derived from his advice. Many of his patrons look upon him as a man gifted with some strange, mysterious power, but he modestly asserts that what he accomplishes is due alone to an understanding of natural laws.

He is a man of kindly feeling toward humanity, and his manner and tone immediately impress one with his sincere belief in his work. A huge stack of grateful letters from people who have received readings from him and who are convinced of the truth of his advice, even Astrologers and Palmists admit that his advice surpasses anything yet known.

The Rev. G. C. H. Haskard, Ph. D., pastor of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, San Francisco, in a letter to Mr. Haskard, says: "You are certainly the greatest specialist and master of your profession. I have been consulting you with much interest and confidence. Your detailed personal readings and advice. The most successful will consult you again and again after corresponding with you once." If you wish to take advantage of Mr. Haskard's generous offer and obtain a free reading, send your date, month and year of birth, state whether Mr. or Mrs., and also send the following verse in your own handwriting:

I have heard of your power
To read people's lives,
And would ask what for me
You have to advise?
Be sure to give your correct name,
Birth date and address and place,
Send your letter to Mr. Haskard, Dept.

to pay postage, which will be refunded

Kinkaid Declares

He Will Not Fight

TOLEDO, O., July 23.—Judge H. H. Kinkaid announced today that he was neither an active nor a receptive candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of Ohio. The convention will be held in Columbus July 26 and 27.

Judge Kinkaid, in an authorized statement, said:

"My friends have made so many inquiries of me concerning the matter that it amounts almost to a discounting of my name. I am not a receptive candidate for the nomination and I hope all will treat this as final."

Magnificent Estate

LONDON, July 23.—Lady Chermide, who died recently, was widely known as the owner of Newstead Abbey, Byron's home, having inherited the estate from her father, W. P. Webb, who purchased it in 1861 from the trustees of Colonel William, to whom it was sold by Byron for $275,000. It expended a still large sum in improvements and on the restoration of the abbey and its old terrace gardens.

POLYGAMY CAUSES EXPULSION OF MORMONS

DRASTIC ACTION IS TAKEN BY GERMANY

The Three American Students
Charged May Be Allowed to Remain.

(By MALCOLM CLARK.)

BERLIN, July 23.—Germany has taken the lead in what will be an international movement against Mormonism and Mormon missionaries. For several years missionaries sent out from England and America have been working diligently on the continent. Recently Mormonism has grown to such an extent that the government took cognizance of protests from various churches.

A campaign to drive Mormonism out of Europe is being conducted. Those who profess to be members of the church will not be molested, as long as their religious observances do not interfere with the civil or criminal laws of the country in which they reside. Only the missionaries who are active members and preaching their doctrine will be ordered to leave the country.

AMERICAN MISSIONARIES.

Among the Mormon missionaries who are expelled from Germany was a young man named Charles D. Atkinson. He is a native of the United States and is a member of the church. He is a young man of about 25 years of age and is a member of the church. He is a young man of about 25 years of age and is a member of the church. He is a young man of about 25 years of age and is a member of the church.

ACT NOT HASTY.

Here Daltwitz the Russian foreign minister, who has expelled the foreign missionaries, did not act hastily. It is understood that the French, Italian, Austro-Hungarian and other governments stand ready to continue proceedings if it is necessary. It may not be necessary, for word from the foreign capitals today said that a number of foreigners who had established themselves as Mormon missionaries had already fled. Mormonism has attained a stronger hold in Germany and England than in many American believe. Missionaries first came across the Atlantic many years ago. At first meetings of proselytes were held in the home of a member of the new church.

Churches have been built and communities have sprung up.

POLYGAMY EXISTS.

Although the missionaries claim polygamy, the civil authorities say it is not an alarming extent in some of the Mormon settlements. It was this phase of the matter, together with the growing power of the Mormon church, that caused the authorities to take drastic action.

Salmon Pack Falls Far Below Normal

SEATTLE, Wash., July 23.—Advises received from Alaska indicate that the salmon pack this year will fall far below the normal. C. H. Buschmann, general superintendent of the Northwestern Fisheries Company, returned from the north yesterday with first advice from plants west of Yakutat. He says that the Kodiak Island and Prince William sound canneries are experiencing lighter runs than usual. The pack will be about normal. When he left Bristol Bay the plants were still making runs, but the pack should be well along now and definite advice are expected from there in a few days.

All Protestant denominations, as well as

NEW YORK, July 23.—The Span-the visit which President Montt of Chile is soon to make to this country.

He sailed from Santiago on July 2, and will arrive here early in August.
The fact that no announcement was made as to the exact purpose of the long trip, gave rise to many theories to account for the executive's action. It became known today, how-that President Montt is ill, and is seeking health for himself.

Oakland Moving Forward Rapidly on High Road to Prosperity

OAKLAND IS RIDING ON THE FLOOD

Tide of Prosperity Flowing Strong in Response to Municipal Building Improvements

Oakland is once more floating with the flood tide of prosperity which has set in strong. The improvements provided on the waterfront and for municipal buildings in the last bond issue are coming to a head and every branch of human activity in the community is responding to the impulse. Thanks to the money more freely on the waterfront and for municipal buildings in the last bond issue are coming to a head and every branch of human activity in the community is responding to the impulse. Thanks to the money more freely on the waterfront and for municipal buildings in the last bond issue are coming to a head and every branch of human activity in the community is responding to the impulse.

First Contract for Municipal Buildings

The contract for the first of the municipal buildings to be erected—namely the fire alarm and police telegraph building—is to be erected at the northeast corner of Oak and Third streets. This was awarded by the Board of Public Works to a San Francisco engineering and construction company as the lowest bidder. The building is to be a two-story structure, 100 feet long and 40 feet wide. It will contain a fire alarm station, a police telegraph station, and a room for the fire department. The building is to be completed by the end of the year.

Oakland Leads All Pacific Coast Ports

This is the first step in retaliation for the unfriendly spirit shown toward Oakland on the other side of the bay and the questionable discriminations that have been selfishly adopted to the detriment of its commercial and industrial development.

The Board of Public Works has also opened the bids for the

OAKLAND'S BUILDING ACTIVITY

Municipal Buildings and Many New and Substantial Business Blocks Started

The municipal improvements contemplated under the bond issue have been started. The contract for the new fire alarm and police telegraph station is to be located in the Lakeside Park, and designed by Architect Walter J. Matthews on park architectural lines, has been awarded and will be built within the next three months on an irregular piece of land on the northeast corner of Oak and Thirteenth streets. Each of the four frontages is ornamental and conform with the illustrations of the front and one side elevations printed in THE TRIBUNE today. The contract price is $44,794 and the award has been made so that Oakland labor and material purchased from Oak and dealers only shall be employed in the building. It is a rather unusual arrangement, but it has been forced on the Board of Public Works as the result of discrimination against this city instituted on the western shore of San Francisco bay.

Beginning to Utilize Bond Issue

That is, however, another story. The story associated with the award of this contract that is of real value is that it constitutes the beginning of the utilization of the bond issue of $3,000,000 authorized for municipal buildings and municipal water front improvements. Recent bids have been received for the construction of the first of the permanent municipal wharves in the harbor water front—namely the pier at the foot of Livingston street in Brooklyn basin, Los Angeles, for the accommodation of the industrial district in that quarter. Bids are also being invited for the construction of 2,000 feet of seawall, or commercial wharf, on the southern water front from Myrtle to Clay street. The remaining 750 feet of wharfage there will be carried out as soon as funds are available. The water front is being satisfactorily extended, and they are in a fair way of being satisfactorily adjusted.

The arrangements for the improvement of the western water front in the Key Route basin are also in a most promising shape of settlement. These improvements involve a covered pier of nearly 4,000 feet.

Meantime, the plans for a new city hall to cost $1,000,000 are nearly in shape for the publication of invitations to bids from contractors. The architects who designed the plans for the building which triumphed in the competition in which the most noted eastern architects of the profession participated a trophy on the ground adapting the plans to the site and arrangements, the details of interior arrangement in conformity with the wants of the administrative departments.

Private Enterprise Is Very Active

While these public works and buildings are being pushed to the front, the construction of the big Oakland hotel to cost with its furnishings between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000, is proceeding under full headway. Every contract except that for the furnishings, has been awarded. The first shipment of structural steel, to be used in the frame of the construction of the municipal wharf in the Brooklyn basin at the foot of Livingston street, East Oakland. The bids are fortunately considerably lower than the city engineer's estimates, which is an assurance that an award will be made and construction started without unnecessary delay. The wharf is to be constructed of reinforced concrete, and will be the first of the series of permanent waterfront improvements to be built in Oakland harbor; or, in fact, anywhere on the shores of San Francisco bay. The Oakland Harbor Commission has anticipated the State in this respect, for the pater pile concrete piers erected on the San Francisco waterfront by the State Harbor Commission and supposed to be permanent have been almost wholly wrecked by jobbery and the treacherous mud foundation on which they were built. In Oakland harbor and on the bay front of Oakland a hardpan foundation gives security to all reinforced concrete wharf structures built on it.

OAKLAND RIDING ON THE FLOOD

Tide of Prosperity Is Flowing Strong in Response to the Building Improvements.

Contracts for Seawall Construction in Sight

The construction of 2000 lineal feet of the new reinforced concrete seawall on the Oakland harbor frontage from Myrtle to Clay street is now being hastened and a contract will be awarded within a few weeks. When this dock is built it will be unequalled by any improvement built on the Pacific Coast for the accommodation of commerce. The quay will correspond, in fact, with the best permanent commercial works constructed in the leading ports in the Old World for shipping and it will be the first permanently constructed quay on the Pacific Coast where the largest ocean-going freighters and transcontinental cars will be brought alongside so that cargoes can swing out of the steamship's hold into the railroad car or vice versa, with one movement of the crane.

Effect of Improvements On South Side Property

The effect of the early construction of these improvements on south side realty is already in evidence, through realty transfers and realty improvements for business uses. The first permanently built brick warehouse ever erected near the waterfront on the south side east of Broadway is now being constructed on the southeast corner of Second and Franklin streets. It is a substantial three-story building and the location for warehouse purposes is superb, for it is within one block of the Western and Southern Pacific railroad tracks and within a stone's throw of the Webster and Franklin street wharves and close to the Adams-Hawaiian Steamship Company has secured a leasehold. This warehouse is the pioneer of many which are sure to follow quickly in the district lying between Broadway and the northern arm of the estuary, and property in that section is beginning to loom up in the estimation of realty traders and investors, as it never has done before. NEW FIRE ALARM AND P. T. STATION

Located in a Public Park, it Has Been Designed to Harmonize.

(Con. from Preceding Page)

The Board of Public Works started actual operations on its municipal buildings program this week by awarding a contract for the new central station for the fire alarm and police telegraph departments, the elevations of two of the four frontages of which, as designed by Architect Walter J. Mathews, are published in THE TRIBUNE today. The exterior of the building has been speedily designed so that it will harmonize with the general plans of park improvement, as it is located in the Lakeside park grounds. The interior will be devoted exclusively to the housing of the electrical plant of the two departments. The two frontages shown in the illustration are respectively eighty-seven and eighty-eight feet in length. The building has been planned on a scale large enough to meet the wants of the city for possibly fifty years to come. It displays the brick building which was erected on the city hall lot twenty years ago and which is to be torn down to make way for the magnificent new city hall whose construction will be started in about five months, when the architects will have finished all of the detailed working plans. The new fire alarm and police telegraph station will be finished, it is expected, within three months. It is necessary to hasten its construction so that the apparatus of the two branches of the municipal electrical service and the city telegraph can be moved into it and the old building razed to clear the way in excavating the foundation for the city hall. The total cost of the new station, under the contract, will be $44,794. All of the labor to be employed in its erection is to be drawn from Oakland and as much of the material as can be obtained here is to be purchased from Oakland merchants and manufacturers. The same policy will be followed in the carrying out of all the public improvements provided for under the bond issue, so far as it is possible to do so.

The new station will be the second public service building to be erected in Lakeside park, the other being the salt water pumping station which has been in service for about two months past.

LIPTON TO BE CROKER'S GUEST

The Tea Merchant Promises to "Shine" at House Party of Former Boss.

LONDON, July 23.—Sir Thomas Lipton has promised to be the guest of Mr. Richard Croker at Glencairn, the "boss's" beautiful place near Dublin, for the great house show, which takes place near the end of August. A very big house party will assemble for this fashionable event at Glencairn and, as usual, Mrs. Stella Bowman, Mr. Croker's niece, will act the part of hostess.

Sir Thomas Lipton, with the exception of the occasion of his appearance at the Lipton Company meeting, has been little in the public eye of late but he is expected to "shine" at the Cowes regatta, where he will be seen in the company of Princess Henry of Battenberg, who has long been his favorite niece, and of Duke of Devonshire, who will pay a long visit to the Isle of Wight with her three children.

Sir Thomas is always the life and soul of a house party and no one is likely to be dull at Glencairn, for Mr. Croker's niece, Mrs. Bowman, is a really fine singer, besides being a charming hostess. Her services are so eagerly sought for in Dublin that she is often booked months ahead in the cause of charity. The people responsible for a big charity concert which is coming off in September at Dublin actually secured her before making any arrangements or mentioning a date.

Mr. Croker and his niece will remain at Glencairn until October, when they go to Palm Beach for the winter. Mr. Croker's horses will run at the Phoenix Park races in August, and this season he has some exceptionally good young horses in training.

in that section has been frequently described by realty men within the past four years as being "as good as gold" and its verity was never more forcibly demonstrated. Recent sales of realty on Lower Broadway and elsewhere in the district show the interest which is awakening in the minds of shrewd investors in that quarter.

REALTY SYNDICATE PIEDMONT SALES

Home Building Is Being Encouraged to Swell Population of Hillside City.

(Con. from Preceding Page)

The Realty Syndicate reports an active realty market in all departments, with a particularly heavy demand for lots in Piedmont.

"We are disposing of a great deal of our scattering properties in Piedmont," said Nat M. Crossley, manager of the real estate department, "and are very anxious to see considerable building started in this district very shortly. We are very anxious to see developments of this kind and although we could probably get more money for these lots we prefer to sell them and have the neighborhood built up. The Oakland Traction Company is running through this district, which in place of very sparsely populated, and an article that we can do to add homes and population to Piedmont will mean a great deal to the Traction Company and to us in our future operations."

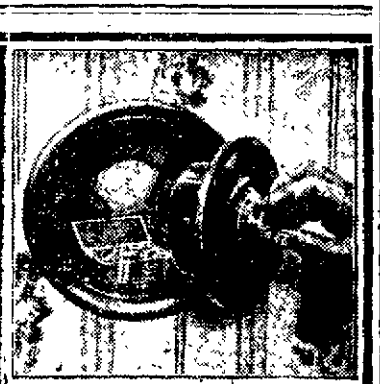

Mr. Crossley stated that the Realty Syndicate is making a big success of its home building department, and that a great many buyers of Piedmont lots are taking advantage of the combination installment home building scheme and contracting for the erection of houses upon their newly purchased property.

"I doubt whether there will ever again be an opportunity to purchase as desirable residential properties in this vicinity as we are offering in Piedmont now," continued Mr. Crossley. "In fact we have some lots at $25 a front foot which, taken purely from a speculative standpoint, are a remarkably good buy. However, we are not trying to encourage speculators, as it would do us practically no good to sell to this class of people, for unless the buyer intends to build he may as well retain the property and get the benefit of the inevitable increase in value. What we want is home builders."

The Realty Syndicate has about 300 of these scattering lots and houses that if it can sell 75 per cent of them to bona fide home builders it will increase the population of Piedmont by at least 1000 inhabitants.

Seeks Fortune From Sunken Treasure Ship

LONDON, July 23.—Somewhere in Davy Jones' locker in the neighborhood of Barcelona, on the Scotch west coast, lies a Spanish treasure ship wrecked there at the time of the great armada. Much treasure has already been spent in attempts to locate the sunken treasure, without results, but now a serious effort is to be made. Lieutenant-Colonel Mackenzie Foss is heading a London syndicate, well supplied with money, which will get busy on the proposed site of the treasure ship, which the colonel thinks he has located within an area of 400 square feet. He is making the land of the Duke of Argyll, from whom permission has been obtained to exploit the wreck.

STATE UNIVERSITY IMPROVEMENTS

Regents Award Contracts for Extensive Changes on the College Grounds.

(Con. from Preceding Page)

BERKELEY, July 23.—In accordance with the Phoebe A. Hearst plans for a "Greater University," the Board of University Regents has just awarded contracts for a number of new roads and avenues through the campus grounds. The contracts were let to the Contra Costa Construction Company, and involve an expenditure of $33,100. Work will be commenced at once.

One of the new avenues contemplated in the plans start from the northeast corner of California Hall and extend westerly to the tennis courts. This avenue will be an extension of street work recently completed near California Hall. From the tennis courts the avenue will extend north of the new library building, intersecting the street near North Hall. Another avenue will be constructed from east of the philosophy building to the west steps of the Hearst building.

The new library will be supplied with brick and granite steps and approaches from the new street to the entrance of the library. The Regents will in a few days open bids for the construction of several new buildings at the Davis farm.

OLD ALAMEDA LANDMARK SOLD

The Webster Street Baseball Grounds, Cricket and Football Field Changes Hands.

ALAMEDA, July 23.—The so-called Webster street cricket and association football ground was this week bought by John G. Croll from Oakland parties, who purchased the property some time ago from the Pacific Investment Company, an organization which was formed to take over the holdings in this city of the estate of the late Senator James G. Fair. Croll is said to have paid less than $10,000 for the property. Twenty-five years ago the tract was used as a baseball park by the old California league. For several years past it has been used during the winter season as a football field by the "Sevens" and during the summer as a cricket field by the clubs listed in the California Cricket Association.

Municipal Buildings and Many New and Substantial Business Blocks Started.

building, is here. The foundations are being adapted for it. The site is a scene of industrial activity. The success of this important private enterprise is assured.

Then, again, there are a lot of business blocks of the most modern and substantial character in progress of construction. The Larkey business block, on Fourteenth street between Clay and Jefferson, four stories in height, equal to the five-story Thayer building adjoining it, is ready for occupancy. The steel frame work of the massive three-story semi-classic Heeseman building on Clay and Thirteenth streets, in the same block, is in course of construction. The Young Men's Christian Association five-story "Class A," $250,000 building at the northwest corner of Telegraph avenue and Twenty-first street is under cover; the excavation for the basement and foundation for the seven-story building to be erected for R. G. Perry on Thirteenth street, between Broadway and Franklin, is in progress; the contract for the $350,000 "Class A" building to be erected for the H. C. Capwell Co., Clay between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, has been awarded; the addition of eight stories to the Realty Syndicate building on Broadway between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, is almost ready to be started; the Wachs block on Thirteenth street between Washington and Clay is nearly completed and a vast number of other important business structures are ready to be started. All of these improvements have a direct bearing on Oakland's immediate and future prosperity, without considering the influence exerted by the costly and extensive improvements which are about to be carried out by the public service corporations, involving the expenditure in the aggregate of over $10,000,000 within the next two or three years.

Southern Pacific Improvements

The Southern Pacific's local electric railway system and the construction of a $2,000,000 new depot will shortly be under way. The conversion of the Seventh street local steam railroad into an electric railway will have to be done within the next sixteen months or the franchise abandoned, as the steam franchise terminates November 20, 1911. Of course, it will not be abandoned, for the Southern Pacific has already made the proposition to the Seventh Street Improvement Association to pave the street with a standard asphalt pavement from gutter to gutter, if the property owner's will consent to the granting of a fifty-year franchise for an electric railway on the thoroughfare, and the proposition will doubtless be accepted.

What all these enormous expenditures mean for Oakland's future progress and prosperity is easy for the most obtuse intelligence to divine. Work promises to be plentiful for those in the building trades and a good mar-

TWENTIETH AND MARKET SALE

A. J. Snyder Negotiates the Transfer of a Corner Lot; New Owner to Improve.

(Con. from Preceding Page)

During the week A. J. Snyder sold the northeast corner of Twentieth and Market streets, 101x108, on account of Mrs. J. V. Jeffress to Michael Sahati. The consideration is said to be $11,000. There are three small cottages on the premises. This is the first piece of realty in that section to change ownership for some time past. The new owner intends making substantial improvements on the property.

PAYS FINE TRIBUTE TO U. S. CO-ED

The Duchess of Marlborough Speaks of Type of American College Girl.

LONDON, July 23.—A meeting in support of the scheme for the removal of Bedford College for Women from Baker street to Regent Park was held recently at Sunderland House, the Duchess of Marlborough presiding. An ideal has been set, it is stated, been procured, and an appeal is being made for $50,000, about half of which sum has been obtained.

In the course of a speech, the Duchess of Marlborough spoke of the splendid type of college-bred women which America produced. "I had not found that college-bred girls made less devoted wives and mothers."

If women were careful enough not also to work their husbands in argument, mightier might to keep any superabundance of knowledge up their sleeves, these seemed to be little opposition on a husband's part to his wife being well educated. (Laughter). It was difficult to comprehend how the girls should be such rooted objection to a part of Englishmen to the higher education of their wives. There must be some secret fear that, hard as they found it to understand a woman now, it would be also hard to understand their own were she highly educated. (Laughter).

There were enormous possibilities open to intellectual and highly trained women in America, and there would be in time just as good opportunities for women in Canada and other sister Dominions, perhaps even in England. "You never can tell."

It was certainly not a fact to be proud of that England for want of funds could not provide the training ground required in order to prepare its women to enter useful and successful careers.

WILL PROTECT WHITE MINERS

The Regulations Proposed Will Benefit Men in the Transvaal.

CAPE TOWN, July 23.—White miners in the Transvaal will materially benefit if the regulations proposed by the recent commission are carried out by the Government. One suggestion is that only white men shall in future receive licensing certificates and that only competent white men shall be allowed to be in charge of mining engines and machinery. The existing rules draw no color line and a number of colored men now hold certificates.

Stringent regulations are proposed to safeguard the health of the mine underground. All dusty rock must be dampened, and no person suffering from tuberculosis or disease of the respiratory organs shall be permitted to work underground. Some suggestions are made with the idea of preventing accidents by down the principle that no incompetent or inexperienced man shall be allowed to take part in dangerous work. The hours of work underground are limited to eight a day exclusive of the time occupied in reaching work and returning to the surface.

Let in sight for building materials, for a long time to come. Every new structure that goes up moreover prompts the starting of another, and every dollar spent for private and public improvements adds to the value of realty.

EDITORIAL

Buyers Already Richer
Though the first lot in Rock Ridge Place was sold only a little over a month ago every buyer is already richer by far than the day he bought his property. It is not only the values rise so visibly while original prices remain the same but Rock Ridge Place is an exception to all rules.
When we offered Rock Ridge Place for sale at from $20 to $30 a foot it was a good buy. The look was it has happened since then Broadway has been ordered paid from the Country Club to Ocean View Drive making land in Rock Ridge Place worth at least $10 a foot more. One half of the property has already been sold and to a most desirable set of buyers. This in itself should add at least another $10 a foot to the lot. If Rock Ridge Place was a good investment six weeks ago it is a far better one today.
But the prices have not been raised. It is still possible to buy a choice lot at the original figures and a set of dollars working even before one builds a home on the property.

Looking Ahead
The man who is able to look ahead is the man who makes money. It is easy enough now to go into Piedmont and see that it is a desirable residence section but that takes no money. The man who is able to look ahead is the man who sees the ground five years ago and see how it would look when it was built-up residence district. The same in Rock Ridge today. The property one or more years from now with houses and gardens. The green open spaces at the entrance give a hint of what this lovely spot will be when each individual buyer has carried out his own plan for beautifying his home site.
Then Rock Ridge Place will be one big beautiful private park. Then Rock Ridge Place will be one big beautiful private park. Every home will be over $5000 in value—many of them will double and treble that amount. There will be green lawns and no bare patches about these homes—just green lawns with bunches of color here and there. The homes will all set back well from the property lines so that the really broad streets will be still wider and more open which will give balance a well-behaved beauty.
Can you wonder that people of the best class are buying in Rock Ridge today—both young men and women who can appreciate the real values offered and can look into the future and grasp the inspiring picture of Rock Ridge Place as it is to be.

An Enjoyable Sunday Outing FOR TODAY

Is a trip to Rock Ridge Place. Take College Avenue car to Lawton.
If you have only one block to walk from the College Avenue car—and you are in the beauty spot of the bay region.
If you have never been to Rock Ridge Place you can scarcely imagine such an ideal private residence park. You have never seen any home section so perfectly planned and improved.
If you will enjoy a sense of freedom from care when you are in these restful hills—though right in the heart of a great city—Rock Ridge Place seems remote and sheltered because it is surrounded by open spaces, the Country Club and the large estates of millionaires.
If we have sold over a third of this magnificent property since June 12th, I give you with us today, we shall no longer be able to ask you to wait longer—not to see it at $20 to $30 a front foot.
